Nats Win, 3-2; Hittle Holds Chisox To 9 Hits

Lefty Beats Chicago 4th Time in Two Years; Griffs Kayo Haefner in 3-Run 3d

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The pitching career of Lloyd Hittle, distinguished only by his ability to beat the White Sox, continued in its narrow groove last night. He licked 'em again on behalf of the Nats, 3-2, at Griffith Stadium.

Manager Bucky Harris, hep to the strange charm Hittle holds over the Chicago club, sprang him on the White Sox for his first start of the season. What followed was Hittle's sixth victory of his major league hitch—and his fourth over Chicago.

It was no breeze for the little red-headed lefthander from the Coast League. The Nats abandoned him, runwise, after a three-run surge that knocked their old pal Mickey Haefner, from the box in the third inning.

Hittle Fans Appling

From that point Hittle had to labor for his triumph, and he was in deep trouble in the White Sox seventh after they packed five hits into the inning, scored two runs and still had the bases full with two out and the redoubtable Luke Appling up.

Harris showed extreme patience with Hittle at that point and left him in the box. He was completely rewarded when Hittle fanned Appling on four pitches.

In making it three straight wins for the slightly amazing Nats, before 3678 chilled fans, Hittle showed a sudden reversal in the control department, walking only one man. He gave up nine hits, but when the White Sox put the tying run on second with one out in the ninth, he breezed home.

Griffith Stadium re-visited was an unhappy time for little Haefner, the fellow who caught on with the White Sox after being fired by the Nats last season. He was slapped around for six hits in the two and a half innings he lasted.

The Nats got to Haefner with some violence in the third. Yost doubled down the left-field line with one out. He held up at third on Dente's single to center, but Noren scored him with a long fly to right. On Philley's throw to the plate, Dente smartly reached second and scored on Eddie Robinson's single to center.

Gift From Michaels

The Nats' third run of the inning was a gift from Cass Michaels, who dropped the throw from Catcher Phil Masi when Robinson tried to go down to second after the throw to the plate on his single. Bob Ortiz promptly scored Robbie with a single to left-center.

Howie Judson relieved Haefner at that point, and the Nats got nothing for the rest of the game against Judson and Rookie Bob Cain—and only three hits.

Joe Ostrowski's double to right started the seventh inning trouble for Hittle who had been pitching three-hit shutout ball to that point. With two out, Carrasquel beat out a hit off Yost's glove, and Pinch Hitter Ed Malone rapped an infield single that scored Ostrowski from third. When Busby singled to left to score Carrasquel with the sec-

Well-Digger Trapped 8 Hours Burned by Flash Fire in Shaft

Well-digger Atteo directs own rescue from shaft bottom

New York, May 9 (U.P.)—A well-digger buried to his waist 18 feet below the earth's surface was critically burned tonight by a flash fire in the narrow shaft where he had been trapped more than eight hours.

Dominick Atteo, 45, reached for a cigarette lowered in a can by one of his sons. The cigarette ignited oxygen that had been fed down the shaft to Atteo and a flash fire set his clothes aflame.

Rescuers who had been trying all afternoon to dig him out poured cans of water down the shaft. A doctor was lowered into the pit to put oil on Atteo's burns and give him a hypodermic. The man, still unable to move his leg, suffered second and third degree burns and shock. Dr. Harold Bergson said he was in a critical condition.

Atteo, father of six children, was buried in a squatting position with his legs apart. Only his head and arms were free, and he exhausted himself trying to scoop away the imprisoning earth with his hands.

Oxygen fed down the shaft, three feet in diameter, freshened the air he breathed, but caused the tragic fire.

Civil Service Moves to Delay Proposed Annual Leave Cuts

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam's 900,000 classified employes—about 180,000 here—have been given an equivalent cut in annual leave since the war of 3 3/7 days. They now work an average of 24 hours a year longer than they did before the war.

So wrote the Civil Service Commission in commenting on the two bills by Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) to reduce annual and sick leave for an estimated 1,300,000 classified and per diem workers. Its report to the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee said in part:

"The commission is not submitting a detailed report with respects to the merits or demerits of these bills. Such a report would require the securing of information as to the prevailing practices in both industry and in State and local governments.

"We, therefore, recommend that no action be taken on these bills until such information has been secured and carefully considered by the Congress."

In other words, the commission is opposing the Douglas bills until a detailed study of the leave practices in and out of the Federal Government can be made. The Senate committee is expected to follow up by ordering the study to be made by the Budget Bureau and the Civil Service Commission in cooperation with its professional staff.

The commission report carried a

Compromise To Home Rule Bill Offered

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) yesterday introduced a bill to give the District a nonvoting delegate in Congress, an elected school board, and a reorganization of District government agencies into 12 departments under the Commissioners.

Some other members indicated they believed a move might be made to get House action on the Harris bill, depending on reactions of the Washington citizen groups that have been urging home-rule legislation including a representative city council.

Harris said he had had the proposal in mind for some months, but had held back from placing it before the House because he did not want it to be construed as a move

Sound Waves Bombard Corn In Search for Increased Yield

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Five agricultural engineers are bombarding hybrid seed corn with intense sound waves at the Agricultural Research Center at Beltsville, Md.

They are testing a theory first advanced by Russian scientists that ultra-sonic vibrations will hasten seed germination and increase yields.

In the course of their experiments they accidentally discovered that chickens cooped in an underground pen away from sunlight increased their egg production 18 percent when subjected to a bactericidal lamp, or health lamp. The lamps are similar to some installed at the White House to kill airborne germs.

They also:

1. Are studying the effects of high-frequency sound waves upon growing plants.

2. Have discovered that high-pitched sound waves will kill mosquito larvae in test tubes in five seconds.

3. Have made successful experiments in Indiana on the use of sound waves to kill the flying moth that lays the corn borer eggs. Corn borers are credited with destroying 350 million dollars worth of corn last year.

4. Discovered that sound waves will break up the fat globules in milk similar to homogenization, although the process at present is far from perfect.

5. Began experiments in the use of sound waves to destroy bacteria in milk, similar to pasteurization. Although it works, the milk will not pass present pasteurization tests, which are based upon discovering how much heat has been applied to the phosphorous in the milk.

6. Are developing radio frequencies for use in telling "what is inside an egg." By an adaptation

Truman Says Red Cruelty Starves China

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Laramie, Wyo., May 9.—President Truman disclosed tonight that the United States is trying through private agencies to get food to the famine-stricken Chinese but the Red regime there is blocking it.

He accused the Communist Chinese government of "heartlessly" exporting food to the Soviet Union in the face of the worst famine in China in more than 100 years. In a bid for the support of 400 million Chinese behind the Iron Curtain, he told a large turnout in the University of Wyoming's Liberal Arts Auditorium:

"We have been working for some time on steps which our country might take to feed at least some of these stricken people."

He brushed off the Chinese Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek with a phrase as one that had "disintegrated." He discussed Russia's "new and terrible tyranny," and ways to combat it, with the people of this once-isolationist cow and sheep country in a "high plane" departure from his whistle-stop slugging.

Three major speeches on as many subjects ranging from a plug for his Missouri Basin plans at Casper, Wyo., to a sales talk for his new small-business program at Cheyenne, marked this third day of his "hired man's report" to the voters.

Mr. Truman's 13-car special pushed tirelessly on, ever deeper into the Northwest, its rear-platform performer playing to somewhat smaller crowds today.

"Well," said the President, "you fellows didn't give me any credit in 1948. So you'll have to figure this one out for yourselves."

Outside of Casper, the train ran through a driving snowstorm, but the weather cleared for the President's outdoor appearance at Cheyenne.

Mr. Truman, who never mentions Republicans by name, was still trying to find a way to get around it. He called them "old fogies" today, just as he previously referred to "reactionaries" and "the opposition."

Victor Johnston, executive secretary of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, continued to play tag with the train, using a fast private plane.

He scouted the President's show at Casper, then flew on to show up at the trainside again at Cheyenne and Laramie.

Johnston still declined the President's invitation to buy a ticket and save money aboard, however.

Phillip Willkie, son of the GOP's 1940 presidential nominee, joined Johnston at Cheyenne, and said he would help "shadow" Truman the rest of the trip.

Into his prepared Laramie speech, the President interpolated an assertion that Secretary of State Dean Acheson "has the confidence

House Adds 385 Millions For Defense

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The House yesterday added 385 millions to the national defense section of the one-package 1951 appropriation bill and then tentatively approved the 29½ billion dollar measure.

Final decision may come today after action on moves to cut up to a billion dollars out of the overall total.

Without opposition, amendments providing additional funds for aircraft procurement, warship modernization and new anti-tank weapons were written into the defense chapter of the bill.

They increased the 1951 military spending fund to $14,296,487,300, though this figure is somewhat misleading. If some expected supplemental defense budget estimates are submitted and approved, the total 1951 new military "obligational authority"—the best yardstick—should run about 13.8 billions.

With approval of the military section, the House finished all of the actual spending chapters of the first omnibus appropriation bill. Still to be considered are some legislative provisions and at least two moves to slash the total.

A motion of Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) directing President Truman to cut all appropriations except national defense by 750 million dollars, is scheduled for action first.

Then a Republican-backed move will be offered by Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), aimed at saving a billion dollars. It would ban filling vacancies in many civilian agencies next year and impose ceilings on various categories of nonmilitary operating expenditures.

To date, the House has added about 450 million dollars to the bill

Denial by Scientist

Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer Listed as at Red Meeting

Oakland, Calif., May 9 (AP).—Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, one of the Nation's top atomic scientists, was described today as attending a secret, closed Communist Party meeting in Berkeley in 1941. That was the testimony of a witness in a State Senate Communist activities probe.

The witness, Mrs. Sylvia Crouch, a former Communist Party courier, gave additional testimony tending to back up an investigator's contention that the meeting was held in Oppenheimer's own home in the Berkeley Hills.

Dr. Oppenheimer, chairman of the powerful advisory committee which shapes policy for the Nation's Atomic Energy Commission, was a director of the atomic research laboratory at Los Alamos, N. Mex., during the war. The first atom bombs were made there.

At Princeton, N. J., where the scientist now directs the institute for advanced studies, his office reported he was out of the city and could not be reached immediately for comment.

Mrs. Crouch, whose husband, Paul, has testified for the Government at numerous anti-Communist trials and hearings, said she picked out Dr. Oppenheimer from a group of pictures shown her by Government agents.

She recognized his picture, she said, as that of a man she had seen for the first time at the Communist meeting on the Berkeley campus. She also picked out the picture

Dolly Keleher Is Evicted To Tune, 'Crazy Over Horses'

Mrs. Keleher, her face covered, is carried from apartment

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

To the neighborly strains of "Horses! Horses! Crazy Over Horses!" Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher, former wife of the former gambler, was evicted bodily yesterday from her plush apartment in Woodley Park Towers.

Defiant to the end, she wore a Mona Lisa smile under a sea-green veil as she was carried out in a stretcher and whisked to Gallinger Hospital.

"Is this my public?" she asked with gracious noblesse oblige as scores of neighbors watched from the lawn and scores more leaned from the windows of the swank apartment house to see a climax it took phalanxes of medics and deputy U. S. marshals to accomplish.

Her Capehart, her Chippendales, her cowhide jewelry box and other like trappings of her 7-room apartment stood in the Towers yard guarded by Dolly's $7000 Italin-marble statue of Aurora, Goddess of Dawn, which was evicted before her.

Carried out for failure to pay her $162.90-a-month rent—which she claimed she couldn't raise

Pooling of Heavy Industries Of Europe Proposed by French

London, May 9 (AP).—Disclosure of a French plan to merge Europe's heavy industries under one head coincide with secret Anglo-American talks here today on how to strengthen the West in the cold war with Russia.

At the same time, the West German government at Bonn decided to accept an invitation to join the Council of Europe, the embryo international parliament at Strasbourg.

The moves from France and Germany, toward unifying western Europe came as United States Secretary of State Acheson conferred here with Prime Minister Attlee and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Acheson arrived by plane from Paris. He conferred with Bevin through the morning, had luncheon with Attlee and met again with Bevin this afternoon.

Their afternoon session had just ended when French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman made a proposal in Paris to pool the German and French steel and coal industries and invite other nations to join the combine. Schuman talked with Acheson yesterday and undoubtedly broached the proposal then.

Integration of West Germany into Western Europe and the Atlantic nations grouping is given top priority by American officials here.

The French action was a step in this direction.

The Bonn announcement was considered gratifying, as both Brit-

Truman Asks Mobilization Planning Shift

President Truman yesterday proposed to make the chairman of the National Security Resources Board the country's war mobilization planning "czar." W. Stuart Symington, former Air Force Secretary, now holds the post.

Mr. Truman also recommended to Congress that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be placed under the Department of Commerce.

The two proposals were among four new Federal reorganization recommendations affecting housing, lending and industrial mobilization. All except that transferring the RFC to the Commerce Department are in line with recommendations of the Commission on Government Reorganization headed by former President Herbert Hoover.

Overwhelming Opposition

Marital Counsel Voted Down By District Bar Association

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

The District Bar Association voted overwhelmingly against the proposal for a marital affairs counsel for local courts last night after hearing two hours' debate.

Only 76 of an estimated 300 members present voted in favor of the proposal, designed after the "friend of court" procedure used in Detroit and other cities. It was developed by a three-judge committee, appointed by Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court and was indorsed by a special Bar Association committee.

The vote came after 40-minute speeches by Jean Boardman, opposing the plan, and by John Alexander, a member of the committee that approved the plan.

Judge Laws addressed a six-page letter to President John L. Laskey, which was read after the debate, despite loud demands for the "question" shortly before midnight.

Before the association's meeting at the Statler, H. Mason Welch and Arthur J. Hilland, the dissenting member of the Bar Association committee, had spoken against the plan at a special meeting of the group. John J. Carmody had supported it.

The proposal, which is accompanied by a bill to be presented to Congress, would eliminate the present office of Domestic Relations Commissioner and substitute therefor a Marital Relations Counsel with a larger staff and broader powers to collect and distribute alimony payments, to collect testimony from litigants and to recommend care and custody of children involved in divorce matters.

Boardman charged that the new office would provide a staff of "clerks who must work for the Government" on business that would be handled ordinarily by "a young lawyer."

He said the proposal would be

Walkout Set For 7 A.M.; Southern Ry. Is Effected

Pennsylvania West Of Harrisburg Hit; Its Head Hopes for 11th-Hour Peace

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Eighteen thousand locomotive firemen were scheduled to strike this morning—7 a. m. Washington time—against four major railroad lines.

The walkout would shut down the Southern Railway System and the Pennsylvania Railroad, west of Harrisburg, and drastically reduce service on the Santa Fe Line and on the New York Central, west of Buffalo.

Although limited to four lines, the strike would have a Nation-wide impact on passenger and freight traffic. Parallel railroad lines are available in some areas, but many points along the affected systems will be cut off from vital rail transportation.

The National Mediation Board, which obtained a two-week postponement of the strike from April 26, kept conferences going through the night with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and representatives of the four roads in the hope of averting the walkout in the eleventh hour.

Pennsy Head "Hopeful"

Walter S. Franklin, president of Pennsy, said last night he was "hopeful" a last-minute settlement might still be reached. "There are some signs that the small concessions discussed in the current negotiations might interest the union," he said.

The dispute is over the union's demand that a second fireman be used on multiple-unit diesel locomotives on the grounds of safety.

The Nation's railroads have turned down the request for an additional firemen on diesel trains—which the lines estimate will cost them 40 million dollars more a year—and insist that featherbedding rather than safety is the issue. The roads' position has been upheld in recent years by two special fact-finding boards appointed by the President under the Railway Labor Act.

No Strike Action Taken

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has also been demanding the addition of a second engineer on the diesels, but has not taken strike action. This union has announced that its engineers—all of whom are former firemen—will not man the posts of the striking firemen, but will stay on the job if the roads try to run any trains with qualified supervisory personnel filling in for the strike firemen.

The Southern Railway System, whose rail network criss-crosses the Southern States, announced at its headquarters here that the line would close down all opera-

$64 Millions Aid For 5 Asian Lands Is Being Prepared

By The Associated Press

The Administration is working out a $64 million economic aid program for five southeast Asian countries. Informed officials reported last night it is to be launched as soon as Congress authorizes use of ECA funds for the purpose.

The largest share is earmarked for Indo-China, to help carry out Secretary of State Acheson's pledge to help local Indo-China and French authorities to curb the Communist-backed revolt there.

Also expected to share are Indonesia, Thailand, Burma and Malaya. The economic proposal is separated from military assistance to be extended to Indo-China and some neighbor countries from a special $75 million fund available to President Truman.

Details of the new program were worked out after the return of a special survey mission headed by Allen Griffin, publisher of the Monterey (Calif.) Peninsula Herald. Responsible officials said it already has the general approval of Secretary of State Acheson and ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman.

Senate FEPC Foes Continue Filibuster

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

In a session devoted more to Missouri politics than the immediate issue at hand, the Senate yesterday moved sluggishly along in its discussion of whether or not it should consider a Fair Employment Practices Commission bill.

Administration stalwarts indicated there would be a test—probably next Wednesday—on whether the necessary 64 votes can be mustered to invoke cloture and thus bring this part of President Truman's civil rights program up for a vote.

Toward the opening of the afternoon's debate Senator William Benton (D., Conn.) took the floor for the Administration to urge passage of the FEPC measure for its international effect in answering Soviet propaganda campaigns in "sensitive areas where the fate of mankind may be decided."

"My observations today," Benton told the Senate, "are the response of my own experience and convictions in the field of international relations.

"We have here a problem that goes to the foundation of these relations and this is closely related to our internal security. Few Americans know that there is this close relationship.

"When they see the sign 'whites only'—or read the words 'restricted clientele' in the summer resort ads—they do not realize that these four words add greatly to the danger and peril of the United States from a hostile world—a peril from which our jet planes and our submarines can offer at best only partial, and indeed, dismal protection.

"As Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Public Affairs for two years after World War II, it was my unhappy responsibility to study how Communist propaganda used and distorted our civil rights problems in the channel of world communication.

"It was then my responsibility to try to counteract the propaganda so far as the true facts and our meager appropriations allowed. As an American delegate to three conferences of UNESCO, I saw how our unsolved civil rights problems hampered our efforts and our prestige in reaching out for the minds of men.

"I am not referring merely to the Sovietized minds. Nor even to the minds of men whose skins are black or yellow. I am referring also to the minds of those very races from which we early American whites in the United States are descended: yes, the Dutch and the French and the British."

Benton warned that segregation in the District of Columbia, Capital of the United States, has a bitter effect upon Negro or other colored diplomats and students from abroad.

Speaking for the Southern opposition, Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) said the measure would "impair the understanding and harmony for which most Southerners are working so earnestly and which history shows we are achieving in large measure."

Describing progress in race relations in the South in recent years, Hill said:

"It is not token legislation of the FEPC type that will improve the lot of Negroes and other minority groups. It is constructive, affirmative programs—education, hospitals and health centers, public health and the prevention of disease, decent homes and housing on the farm and in the city, adequate wages and economic security under our American free enterprise system.

"I warn against the evils of this bill. It is a snare for those who are zealous but ignorant, well-meaning but without understanding. It is a delusion for those who seek in it the answer for their hopes and needs."

Hill cited the late Justice Brandeis' comment that the greatest of all rights is "the right to be let alone."

"The right to be let alone," he said, "is the most comprehensive of all rights and the one most valued by civilized men."

A fiery exchange between Senator Tom Connally (D., Ill.) lightened the closing hours of the debate.

Douglas developed the point that the bill really referred only to corporations since it specifically exempted the employers of less than 50 persons.

Connally and Hill launched a double-barreled attack on this as denying equal protection under the law.

Connally said, "Why then this proceeds by degree." He commented that if a man has less than 50 employes he can "do as he damn pleases," but if he has more than 50 "you'll bring the law after him."

In other words, he said, if there are only 49 employes, "you'll just give him the syringe, but if he has 51 you'll cut his throat."

"This bill is a political bill," shouted Connally, "and I'm surprised that the learned Senator from Illinois, for the sake of a few little dirty, nasty votes all covered up with slime, would violate the freedom——"

Mildly, Douglas objected to being characterized as seeking slime-covered votes.

Connally made a passing reference to Douglas being a prospective vice presidential candidate, and Douglas returned that even Senators from Texas sought votes.

States' Righters Plan Drive To Grab '52 Balance of Power

Jackson, Miss., May 9 (AP).—States' Rights Democrats studied a bold plan tonight for an intensive South-wide drive for the balance of national political power.

Proposals for such a campaign went before a night meeting of the States' Rights Executive Committee. That group will bring the definite program Wednesday to the third national States' Rights meeting.

On the eve of the meeting here, an expected tug-of-war between pro-States Rights Democrats and those who favor sticking with the national party failed to materialize in the Louisiana State Democratic Central Committee. When the meeting opened at Baton Rouge, La., members said an understanding had been reached. They did not say what that understanding was.

Senator Russell Long, son of the late Senator Huey Long, is a candidate for renomination in the July 25 Democratic primary which is tantamount to election. Long has announced he favors staying within the national party. Anti-Long forces have announced they seek to unite behind a single candidate to oppose him, but as yet no agreement on a candidate has been announced.

Leander Perez, one of the leaders in the Louisiana committee, is also director of the States' Rights National Committee.

The committee adopted a resolution criticizing the proposed Fair Employment Practices Commission before Congress, and said "the State of Louisiana desires very much to be left to its own devices" as to "matters and things embraced" in the bill.

The FEPC also drew the fire of Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.). In an address at Cleveland, Miss., he scored the civil rights program and deficit spending as markers along the "reckless march" to socialism.

Insurgent States' Righters captured four Deep South States in 1948. They hope to get the whole South in 1952. That might give them the balance of power in the presidential election.

The program under study would take money. It would include a paid organization to work throughout the South, hotbed of opposition to President Truman's civil rights proposals.

State, county and precinct organizations are planned in each Southern State. All would be perfected in time for the 1952 presidential race.

One States' Rights leader estimated two million dollars would be needed. W. W. Wright, vice chairman of the executive committee, fixed that figure as a sum "to shoot for."

French Would Unify West's Big Industry

By Russell Hill

Paris, May 9 (NYHT.).—The French government proposed today to pool all steel and coal production in France and Germany in order to end the traditional rivalry between the two countries and lay the foundations for the unification of Europe.

Other European countries, including Britain, will be invited to join in putting their coal and steel industries under a common high authority.

Strong French opposition must be anticipated on both economic and political grounds. One expert commented that German prices are about a third lower than France's and that industrialists here are certain to set up a howl at the prospect of direct German competition.

Acheson Told of Plan

Furthermore, the fear and mistrust of Germany as the result of the last three wars is bound to crystallize into parliamentary opposition.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman explained that both parliaments, as well as those of any other countries which might join in, would have to ratify a treaty giving effect to the proposal. In the case of Germany, the approval of the Franco-British-American high commission also would be needed.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson was told of the proposal yesterday in a "private conversation," Schuman said, but only in an informal way since the final decision had not been taken by the cabinet.

Main Points

Main points in the proposal are:

1. All Franco-German steel and coal production are to be placed under a joint high authority.

2. This "solidarity of production" will make war between France and Germany "unthinkable" and "materially impossible."

3. The joint products will be offered to all countries on the same terms, and will make it possible for Europe to develop the African continent.

4. The high authority will be given the tasks of modernizing production; of making coal and steel available on the same terms on the French and German markets; of developing a joint export policy; and of equalizing the living conditions of workers.

5. All customs duties on coal and steel between France and Germany will be abolished and differential railway freight rates will be prohibited.

6. The high authority will have nothing to say about the ownership of the industrial properties.

Of western Europe's annual steel production of about 45 million tons, Germany accounts for about nine million tons, and France, including the Saar, which is economically united with it, for about 11 million tons.

Western Germany is producing coal at the rate of about 100 million tons a year, and France and the Saar at the rate of about 60 million, out of a total western European production of around 450 million tons.

West Is Cold To Red Note On Elections

Berlin, May 9 (AP).—A Russian proposal that all occupation troops be removed from Berlin as a prelude to a "free and democratic" city election was rebuffed by anti-Communist German and Western Allied spokesmen alike today.

French Maj. Gen. Jean Ganeval spoke most plainly for the Western powers, whose garrisons the Russians would like to see sent 100 miles to western Germany. He said the Soviet proposal cannot be taken seriously.

"The city could then be like an island lost in the middle of the Soviet Zone and it would be easy for the Russians to take possession of it at very little cost," he said. "Berlin would be surrounded by the garrisons of the Soviet Zone."

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy asked in Paris:

"What do they, the Russians, do? Withdraw to Potsdam?"

Potsdam is a suburb of Berlin.

Arlingtonians Back Changes In Hatch Act

The chairman of the Arlington Democratic executive committee yesterday blasted what he called "the professional politicians of Arlington's nonpartisan movement" for their opposition to a proposed Hatch Act amendment.

The committee chairman, Harrison Mann, said nonpartisans "desire to preserve a monopoly on the vote of the Federal employes by seeking to continue in effect a vicious and discriminatory law that prohibits Government employes participating with the political party of their choice."

Mann accused Harley Williams, chairman of the nonpartisan Better Government League, of "trying to deceive the public into believing that the pending amendment gives the Civil Service Commission new power to take away the right of Government employes to participate in local affairs."

"Actually," Mann said, "the commission already has the authority to give or deny this privilege."

Criticism of the nonpartisan stand also came from Charles O. Pratt, former president of the now defunct Greater Arlington Association and a member of the Republican county executive committee.

Pratt said he favored the Hatch Act changes because "I don't want people to be forced to vote for a nonpartisan for fear of reprisals by the Federal Government."

ish and American officials said West Germany should show a willingness to throw her lot with western Europe and participate fully.

All the British-American meetings today were secret, but it was known the Russian and German problems came in for top consideration.

The United States State Department's Russian expert, Charles E. Bohlen, attended all the sessions. The American High Commissioner to Germany, John J. McCloy, took part in the afternoon meeting.

Informed sources said the United States supports participation of Germany in the European economic and political fields, but not the military field. It is felt that Germany's economic strength is vital to the Western cause. This would entail giving Germany control of her foreign affairs and a place at international conference tables.

Britain was represented as less eager for German participation until the Germans showed by their actions more willingness to participate.

Acheson was represented as feeling the main task of the present London conference is to strengthen the West's hands by all means possible against the Soviet Union.

First there would be a unification of western Europe's economic strength. This would be followed by an increase in military power to block any Soviet aims of conquest.

Authoritative sources said several proposals are under consideration for achieving unity.

One would be to set up a political and economic counterpart of the Atlantic Pact nations which would embrace West Germany and other European nations outside the pact.

Neither American nor British sources were hopeful that the Big Three will be able to reach any definite decisions at this meeting, particularly on the German problem.

They felt the Big Three might reach a declaration of common aims and set up study committees to put these aims into definite proposals.

E. D. Johnson Appointed to High Army Job

Johnson, 44, was a wartime colonel in the Air Force. He is a native of Hamilton, Ohio, and is vice president of Loomis, Sayles & Co., economic consultants and investment advisers. His home is in Greenwich, Conn. The nomination requires Senate confirmation.

Miracle Drugs Cure Topers, Says Doctor

New York, May 9 (U.P.).—A cure for alcoholism and the hangover was announced today at the opening session of the New York State Medical Society annual meeting.

The report came from Dr. James J. Smith, director of research on alcoholism of the New York University-Bellevue Medical Center. He said flatly that both alcoholism and the hangover could be cured through treatment with hormones.

Smith said research has shown that alcoholism is the result of an unbalanced production of hormones, particularly those of the pituitary gland, the master gland in the human body.

He said two "wonder hormones" were so scarce that their value — acth and cortisone — had been used experimentally, but that they could not be determined fully. However, other hormones from the addrenal glands, such as ACE and desoxycorticosterone, will bring persons with acute alcoholism under control within 24 hours. In addition, he found that injection of vitamin C is helpful.

"The treatment of acute alcoholism no longer presents a problem," he said. After the patient is given the harmone-vitamin C treatment his "craving for alcohol disappears, a sense of well being is induced promptly, appetite is restored, the nervous tension and jitteriness disappear, the patient becomes calm and usually sleeps without sedation."

Of hangovers, he said:

"Hangover, which is not peculiar to alcoholics but which is a sequel to over-indulgence in alcohol by any person, can be abolished quite readily with the use of ACE, either intramuscularly (injection into a muscle) or intravenously (injection into a vein) depending on the severity of the symptoms."

Britain Seeks Funds to Aid Burma's Fight

London, May 9 (AP).—The British government asked Parliament today to approve a £3,750,000 ($10,500,000) interest-free loan to Burma to combat communism.

Minister of State Kenneth Younger said the amount was Britain's share of a two-year Commonwealth loan of £6,000,000 ($16,800,000) to the struggling Burmese government, with Ceylon, India, Pakistan and Australia contributing the remainder.

Rangoon dispatches disclosed that Burmese Foreign Minister Sao Hkun Hkio asked United States Roving Ambassador Philip Jessup two weeks ago for a $50,000,000 rehabilitation loan. United States Ambassador David M. Key said in Rangoon this was in addition to money Burma hopes to get under President Truman's Point Four development program.

Red Deserter Bares Spy Ring Details in Iran

Tehran, May 9 (AP).—Documents, names and details of a vast Soviet spy network in Iran have been handed to Western authorities and the Iranian government by a former Russian official.

This was disclosed today by authoritive sources, who said the Soviet government knows its spy ring has been exposed.

Failure of the Iranian government to act on the information is causing acute concern among Iranian military leaders and Western diplomats.

Downed Plane's Life Rafts Show 10 Aboard Were Killed

A Navy spokesman said yesterday a careful examination of two life rafts from the unarmed United States plane lost in the April 8 Baltic incident with the Russians has convinced top naval officers that all 10 crewmen aboard were killed.

He said all evidence indicated that none of the crew was able to leave the Navy privateer which either exploded in the air or when it hit the water. Inspection of the plane's nose wheel lent confirmation to this conclusion, he said.

An aroused Congress drew this same conclusion shortly after the Russians charged that a "B-29 type" plane had flown over Soviet-occupied Latvia, exchanged shots with Sovieit fighters and was chased back to sea. Both the House and Senate unanimously passed a resolution awarding posthumous decorations to the fliers.

The State Department has rejected the Russian version of the incident. In strongly worded notes, it said that there was no B-29 bomber in the area at that time, and that the missing plane was unarmed.

Two life rafts from the privateer and its nose wheel were recovered in the Baltic area and brought here for official examination.

A Navy spokesman said one of the rafts was "burned in a folded condition." There was no evidence that either life raft had been used by any crew members after the plane exploded, the spokesman said.

Russia Makes Lend-Lease Offer

NYHT News Service

Soviet Russia has offered the United States a substantial dollar settlement of lend-lease claims, it was learned yesterday.

While the amount is still only a fraction of the latest American demand, there is a chance of an early agreement. Officials here declined to reveal the amount offered by Soviet Russia and also refused to disclose to what extent the American claim had been pared down. However, the State Department said that a "new approach" would soon be made by this Government, probably within the next three weeks.

It is expected that the new approach will involve a further reduction in the American cash demand but only on condition that Russia return a large amount of equipment.

Meanwhile, the State Department disclosed that the United States has called on Russia to return by June 30 two ice breakers loaned under lend-lease. The reueqst was made in a note from Acting Secretary of State James E. Webb to Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin.

Last fall Russia returned a third icebreaker to Yokosuka, Japan, but said she was unable to deliver the other two, pleading that they were stuck in unusually heavy Arctic ice.

Spread of Slot Machine Ban In Service Clubs Here Doubted

Defense officials yesterday expressed doubt that the recent ban on slot machines at the Pentagon Officers' Athletic Club would be extended to other officer and non-com clubs in the area or nationally.

A Department of Defense spokesman said the "one-armed bandits" were taken out of the Pentagon club on verbal orders of a "top department official," but that "no other orders have been issued on the subject applicable to Washington or the field."

Officials pointed out that the Pentagon club—established within the Federal office building to help desk officers keep physically fit—is in a different category than clubs on military reservations.

The latter—often the sole amusement place available for officers off duty—are partially supported by profits from slot machines. They are owned by the clubs and largely played by members. Virtually every Army, Navy and Air Force officers' club has a barrage of the "bandits."

Spokesmen for the Departments of Army, Navy and Air Force made it plain that they are not considering any ban on the machines. The Defense Department was less explicit, and indicated that the form of a pending bill might determine what would happen if passed.

Tuning Car Radio Leads To 2-Way Crash, Wreck

Tronton, Ohio, May 9 (AP).—Fred Hinchel bent down to tune his automobile radio and his new car smashed into an eastbound Norfolk & Western freight train today.

The slightly battered car halted on a parallel track. The bruised Columbus man walked across the track to get luggage tossed out by the impact. A westbound freight came along. It demolished the car.

Senate Crime Probe Body To Be Named

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Vice President Barkley is expected today to name the five-man special Senate committee to investigate interstate crime.

As of last night the line-up, responsible sources stated, included Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) as chairman and Senators O'Conor (D., Md.), Hunt (D., Wyo.), Wiley (R., Wis.), and Tobey (R., N. H.). However, Senator O'Conor has asked, it was reported, to be left off and if he cannot be persuaded to serve his place is expected to go to Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.).

First big job will be to name the committee's counsel. Kefauver has declared he wants an outstanding lawyer of national reputation. The Senate already has approved a joint resolution to pay the chief counsel up to $17,500, with up to $12,500 for an assistant counsel, but the House also must act on the matter. The resolution has received House committee approval.

Meanwhile, the House Interstate Commerce Committee is in recess, subject to Chairman Crosser's call, on the Senate-approved bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines.

The House hearings last week were overshadowed by the Senate crime investigations. But the transcript indicates the committee appears favorable to the bill.

Bar Vetoes Marital Plan

an expanded domestic relations commissioner's office—"the same old circus in a larger tent with another ring, two monkeys and an elephant added, with the exit closed."

Alexander quoted a statement, also cited by Judge Laws in his letter, from Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) that the friend-of-court plan after 21 years in Detroit is "a preeminent and outstanding success."

Previous opinions by the United States Court of Appeals in divorce cases, demanding specific details of plans for custody of children, constituted a "mandate" for the association, Alexander said.

Judge Laws advocated adoption of the group's majority report with an "appeal in the public welfare."

The friend-of-court plan would relieve a "distressing situation" of delay, waste of time, and money and confusion in the courts, he said.

"Under the proposed system, with adequate personnel and powers, cases will be both expedited and determined on reliable facts," Judge Laws wrote.

But when a vote was taken such a majority stood for "no" that tellers did not take a count.

3000 Citizens Flee Homes as Village Burns

Cabano, Quebec, May 9 (U.P.).—Flames fanned by high winds ate through this village today, driving its 3000 residents from the town. They fled in every available vehicle.

The fire destroyed three hotels, two lumber yards and between 75 and 100 homes.

Cabano is only 65 miles from Rimouski, where a 20-hour fire on Sunday destroyed one third of the town and made 2000 persons homeless.

The fire broke out shortly after 10 a. m. (EDT) in a private home and high winds drove the flames into the Dube Hotel next door. Within minutes, the hotel was ablaze and flames were spreading to all other adjoining buildings.

The villagers fled for safety to four nearby towns. The evacuation was orderly and there were no reports of casualties.

The army said 100 soldiers who had been on duty at Rimouski rehabilitating fire victims would be sent here within a few hours.

In Quebec City, the Red Cross mobilized its disaster equipment to aid the citizens of Cabano, but its stores had been so depleted by the weekend fire at Rimouski that it had to appeal to drug stores to contribute first aid equipment.

Flash Floods Take 11 Lives In Nebraska

Omaha, Nebr., May 9 (AP).—Eleven persons were dead or given up for lost tonight as the result of devastating flash floods in southeast Nebraska.

And hopes waned for the safety of at least five persons still listed as missing.

The fatality count was raised by five late today when Sheriff Carl Ryder of Nebraska City said he had given up all hope for five persons whose car was swept off a highway near Auburn, Nebr., early today. The car was found in a field off the highway.

The passengers, en route to a funeral in Kansas, were Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Krause and a 3-year-old son, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pendrick, all of Nebraska City.

Given up for lost also was Mrs. Ernest Svoboda of Beatrice, Nebr., one of four persons caught in a car by flood waters south of Lincoln.

The town of Dewitt (population 500), some 30 miles south of Lincoln, was completely flooded. Buildings appeared to be standing in a big lake.

Overnight rains ranging up to eight inches in a few hours were too much for creeks and rivers to handle. The rolling waves of run-off water engulfed homes, trapped motorists on the highway, and wrecked highways, bridges and fences.

China Bars Famine Aid, Truman Says

and support of the vast majority of the American people" in his present Atlantic Pact mission.

The crowded auditorium applauded the statement.

He said that Acheson, now in Europe, is "working out a number of problems with our partners in the North Atlantic Treaty" and his work means much to the peace of the world.

At Casper and Cheyenne he continued to strike at "selfish" people, who he charged had "exploited" the West under past Republican administrations but in Laramie tonight he concentrated his fire on the "new" tyranny of Soviet communism.

Accusing the new Red "taskmasters" of China of tragic indifference to the plight of Chinese millions, he said "the attitude of the present authorities in China has forced the withdrawal of American official representatives from that country."

"However, there are still a number of American religious, educational, and charitable organizations which have representatives in China who might be able to help out.

"We are now trying to find a way for the Government to get food into the hands of these private agencies for distribution in China."

The President said he does not know whether the private American agencies will be permitted by the Communist rulers to provide this assistance.

We'll Keep on Trying

"The Communists so far have tried to deny the existence of a famine," he said. "They have rebuffed the efforts of others to discover the facts. They have even sent to the Soviet Union food which is desperately needed by the Chinese people. Nevertheless, we shall keep on trying to find ways to get some food to the Chinese people."

This type of aid was urged in the Senate some time ago by Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), apparently assuring the effort of bipartisan support.

Mr. Truman accused the Russian Reds of "a method of attack far more subtle than the ancient and direct method of military attack" and said more understanding, alertness and determination are needed to combat it. As the free world demonstrates moral and material superiority, and as peoples now wavering turn to democracy, he predicted the danger of Communist domination will dwindle and finally disappear.

"This is a long-time project," he warned. "The conflict that exists in world affairs will be with us for a long time. There is no quick, no easy way to end it." Whether we like it or not, he said, we have become citizens of a larger community—"the whole world."

He described as "the great challenge of our age" the fact that "strangers have become fellow citizens at a time when the world is so deeply divided." He said it may take "many years" to turn back the Communist threat but "the struggle for peace, security, and stability in world affairs can be won."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), described by the President as "my good friend," appeared with him at Casper and Cheyenne. At Cheyenne he urged "measures" which will challenge the power of monopoly not in the courts but in the market place, O'Mahoney's favorite theme.

Here he outlined in detail the program he presented to Congress last week to stimulate and strengthen small business by: (1) Insured bank loans; (2) special investment companies to extend venture capital and Long-term loans: (3) Liberalized RFC credit; (4) Technical help from the Government and (5) Centralizing small-business aids under the Commerce Department.

He said he expects the program to meet "determined opposition" from those who cry "Government interference" to hide their "selfish alarm." He said such people are living in the dead past.

The President chose Casper, in the Upper Missouri Valley Basin, to urge some of the valley development ideas he hopes some day will materialize in a Missouri Valley Authority, but he never mentioned MVA by name.

Sees Problems Combined

He told the people in this water-thirsty area that soil and forest conservation, flood control, and the development of power, navigation and irrigation "must all be tackled and solved together."

His visit to this snow-peaked region was part of dedicatory ceremonies for Kortes Dam, 50 miles southwest of Casper. He called the new dam a source of strength in reclaiming the resources of the West.

In contrast he recalled the "Teapot Dome" scandals of the Harding Administration. The Teapot Dome oil fields lie only 50 miles north of Casper. Truman called it a symbol of the "greed and privilege" that stripped the West of its resources in another generation.

"There are still reactionary forces that oppose every forward-looking proposal to develop our resources," he said. "The philosophy that produced Teapot Dome is not dead."

As in 1948, he ad-libbed folksy lines into all of his speeches.

Wisconsin farmers have been fighting a grasshopper plague, but Truman topped all of their stories. He said his mother told him of a swarm of the pests in Missouri "that even ate the handle off our pitchfork."

Up bright and early in Casper for a morning constitutional beneath the snow-clad peaks, he was greeted by this bannered headline in the Casper Tribune-Herald: "Welcome to the Truman Early Risers Walking Society."

With Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint and former Governor of Wyoming aboard, he talked about the early trials of women's suffrage. At Wendover, Wyo., he told a crowd of 400 that some people even called that "socialistic," just as some oppose any forward-looking change.

Why, even Washington newspapermen balked when he abandoned the "stuffy" old press conferences in the White House oval room and moved over to a place where they all could sit down, he told the crowd.

Boy Menace, Brown Insists He Was Told

The police chief of Prince Georges County reiterated yesterday that he was told George Mooney, jr., was dangerous just before the youthful escapee was shot to death by police.

Police Supt. Ralph W. Brown said that he received this word last Friday and then ordered the hunt that ended in the 14-year-old's death.

On Monday, Lawrence Prentiss, a counselor of the Industrial Home School—from which young Mooney escaped—denied he labeled the fugitive dangerous. The youth was shot down while crossing the Patuxent River in trying to escape from Prince Georges and Anne Arundel Counties. He lived at 20 14th st. ne.

Major Brown quoted Prentiss as saying to him over the telephone that Mooney was "dangerous" and, unless he was apprehended immediately, "there might be a shooting and some holdups."

The police head said he issued orders for the search "accordingly."

Census Director Puts Population At 152,250,000

St. Louis, May 9 (U.P.).—Roy V. Peel, director of the Bureau of Census, estimated today that the official 1950 census will show the United States has a population of 152,250,000.

Peel said the count todate it 145,000,000 with only 5 percent of the census to be completed.

In 1940 when the last census was taken, the official population of the continental United States was 131,669,275.

Peele said the 1950 census is "one of the greatest peacetime operations ever undertaken" by the country.

Missouri Scandals Cause Senate Row

By The Associated Press

An angry row about Kansas City vote fraud charges was set off in the Senate yesterday by President Truman's reference in a Western speech to the Teapot Dome scandal.

Senator Kem (R., Mo.) broke into a speech by Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.) to ask if Lucas knew that "in every campaign in which Harry Truman has been elected in Missouri there is strong evidence that there was fraud in the balloting."

"I resent that," Lucas shouted back, accusing Kem of saying that in 1948 President Truman carried Missouri "because of fraud in the ballot box."

Kem denied it, saying Lucas had "misquoted me," and tried to get the floor on a point of personal privilege to answer. He said he never claimed Truman victories were the actual result of fraud.

In the resulting yelling, Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) bobbed up to demand "regular order."

Lucas, resuming his speech, said with ironic reference to Kem: "That's what you call a gentleman."

He said the Missourian had been in the Senate four years and did not "even know the rules."

He told Kem to "sit down" and added that he would not yield again.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) started it all quietly enough with a speech replying to Mr. Truman's remarks on the oil scandals of the Harding administration.

Ferguson said "greed and privilege" and "fat cats" have prospered under the Truman Administration. He recalled the President's long association with the Pendergast political machine in Kansas City.

He recalled the nomination of Edwin Pauley, California oil man, to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and the testimony of Former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes that Pauley had said he could get $300,000 in campaign contributions from California oil interests if the Government would not file suit for tidelands oil lands.

Ferguson said he thought that statement showed the Teapot Dome philosophy is not dead.

(The Pauley nomination was withdawn after violent objections had been raised in the Senate).

Ferguson commented that Mr. Truman, as a Senator had "spoken in behalf of Tom Pendergast on the Senate floor" after the Kansas City political leader had been convicted in a Federal court.

He mentioned President Truman's pardon of former Mayor Curley of Boston, who was convicted of mail fraud.

He recalled the income-tax case against Eugene Casey, former White House assistant, and the Kentucky vote fraud case involving Edward Prichard, another one-time New Deal official.

"And what about the privileges of Mr. Maragon, and about the deep freezes of Harry Vaughan?" Ferguson asked.

John Maragon, one-time White House hanger-on, recently was convicted of perjury in testimony in a congressional investigation of the activities of "five percenters" who represented businessmen in Government dealings. Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's Army aide, also was named often in the "five percenter" inquiry, much of the talk being about seven deep freeze units he was given by the Albert J. Verley Perfume Co. of Chicago, a Maragon client, for distribution among Washington notables.

critical tone throughout. At one point it warned:

"To the degree that working conditions are made less favorable, the Government will experience more difficulty in recruiting intelligent and efficient employes. The Government has been brought to the realization in recent years that the kind of employes it gets depends in large part on the rewards it offers for service, and that the public service suffers substantial handicaps in competing for the best.

"An individual who considers entering the Government service is faced with the facts that there is a fixed ceiling on the financial reward he can hope for, no matter how capable he may be and no matter how long and diligently he may serve, and that he will not have the same freedom of action in many respects as other citizens.

"Against these disadvantages, Government service offers a certain amount of comparative security, a satisfactory retirement system, and leave rights which allow some flexibility in the way of occasional absences from the job. From the standpoint of recruiting the best employes for the Government service it is desirable that working conditions be as favorable as possible."

The commission cited from the record to show that classified people today work longer than they did before the war. Its report said:

"The 7-hour working day was established in 1893, and in 1931 Saturdays were shortened to a maximum of four hours, making a 39-hour work week for the Government's 'white-collar' employes. Consequently, before World War II such employes worked 39 hours a week, which without leave or holidays would have amounted to 2035 hours in a year (52 weeks and one day.

"Today, the 40-hour work week which has been established since the war amounts to 2088 hours a year, and subtracting seven 8-hour holidays and 26 8-hour days of leave, the employe now has 1824 actual hours of work, 24 more than before the war, the equivalent to a loss of 3 3/7 days of leave.

Forget Atom Bomb, Noted Architect Says

A leading architect said yesterday that dispersion of large cities may well be desirable for defense against superbombs, but that it is much more important to build ourselves comfortable homes.

Ralph Walker of New York, president of the American Institute of Architects, told a press conference that "the idea of planning the entire architecture of the United States against a future force which we really know nothing about is just absurdity."

He said the desire of people to live comfortably still is the greatest force on architecture, and will continue to be "the most important thing to achieve."

Walker's remarks were made at the Mayflower Hotel, where the AIA will open its eighty-second annual convention today. The convention will deal primarily with city and regional planning, he said.

The AIA president pointed to studies he made during the past war to drive home his point.

"When we studied dispersal of urban facilities during World War II, we started with defense against the 500-pound bomb," he said. "Then came the 2000-pound bomb, and on up to 16,000, then the A-bomb, and now it's the H-bomb.

"Before you get through planning for one weapon after another, you finally say, 'the hell with it.' You don't know what to plan for next. Meanwhile, you might as well live comfortably, live with your neighbor, and hope to enjoy yourself."

Anyway, Walker said, decentrallzation of American cities is going on now all the time. He is for it all right, he said—but from the standpoint of human comfort, not defense.

Gassed Million Jews, Ex-Nazi Gets Death

Berlin, May 9 (AP).—A West Berlin court last night sentenced to death a former SS officer on charges of having gassed "more than a million Jews" in a Nazi concentration camp in Poland.

The defendant, 50-year-old Erich Bauer, was "gassing officer" of a camp near Lublin in 1942-43. He was convicted after testimony of a string of prosecution witnesses who charged him with "personally pushing the Jews into the gas chambers."

He was arrested recently when a surviving inmate of the Sobibor Camp recognized him in a Berlin street.

Realty Board Divided on Court Ruling

Realtors' opinions were mixed yesterday on the effect of Monday's Supreme Court ruling that the Washington Real Estate Board violated the antitrust act by setting brokers' commissions.

However, most Real Estate Board spokesmen said the decision will have little or no effect on rates charged for sales and other services.

Roger J. Whiteford, former counsel for the board, said he does not believe there will be any change in the situation because "all they can do now is say the board can't fix rates, specify rates in the board's by-laws, or make specific rates mandatory."

"They haven't been doing any of these things for several years anyhow," he said.

"There is nothing to prevent the board from doing what they have been doing," said Whiteford, "namely, saying that a certain amount is a fair compensation for such and such a service."

Whiteford and Charles J. Rush, executive secretary of the local board, said the rate schedule that was used until its suspension in 1948 was merely a guide for members of the board.

It was not mandatory, board officials pointed out, and furthermore the rates could not have been enforced in the whole District because only about 250 real estate men are members of the board, they said.

Board President Oliver W. Walker, however, said he personally feels the decision will have an "unstabilizing" influence on the real estate business because the board will not be able to set a standard fee that the public accepts.

Britain Suspends 23

London, May 9 (AP).—Twenty-three government employes have been suspended for "security reasons," Douglas Jay, fiancial secretary to the treasury, announced today.

'In Lap of Gods,' Sumner Pike Says of A-Bomb Prospects

Whether the United States can produce a hydrogen bomb is a matter "in the lap of the gods," the acting chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission told a news conference yesterday.

Sumner T. Pike said the prospects are "somewhere between probable and possible." But the effort is being made, he said.

Pike also confirmed reports from military sources that the AEC is working on a "variety" of atomic weapons. But he declined to be pressed into giving any details, or into saying even whether some of the other weapons were something else than bombs.

What's wrong with this picture?

What's wrong? Plenty! For you won't find a single one of your tax dollars "working" for the Southern Railway System.

That's because railroads are self-supporting. They stand on their own financial feet—not yours. They pay the costs of building and maintaining their "highways" ...including bridges, tunnels and signals... out of their own pockets—not with your tax dollars.

Unfortunately for you ... and for the tax-paying railroads ... that isn't true of other forms of commercial inter-city transportation. Air, water and highway carriers use tremendously expensive transportation facilities paid for and maintained ...not with their money...but with your tax dollars and ours!

It will be a great day for all taxpayers ...and better for all forms of transportation ... when the "grown-up" highway, air and waterway carriers are weaned from the public purse and required to "pay their way"—as only railroads now do.

Some Sound Advice About Investing

Unbiased Counsel of Economics Professor for Navy Officers Makes Sense for Average Investor of Modest Means

The following excerpt is from an article entitled "A Savings Program for the Naval Officer" in the December issue of the U. S. Naval Institute Proceedings.* It says so many things about investing that we've tried to say ourselves—only better—that we feel it's well worth repeating here.

"If a man will give the same thought and attention to a stock purchase that he does to buying an automobile, and 'buys for the long pull,' he will generally get more for his money than in any other type of investment. As it happens, ever since the collapse of the bull market in 1946, most dividend-paying stock has been selling at bargain rates, with some issues paying dividends equivalent to 10 per cent on investment.

"Most people after reading the Wall Street Journal and the Magazine of Wall Street for a few months begin to feel they know what they are about in buying stocks. Brokers, generally speaking, are chary in proffering advice unless it's asked for. However, though brokers are far from infallible, it's well to remember that security-buying is their business, and their views are always more likely to be correct than a layman's.

"Unless an officer makes a hobby of the stock market, and is on a shore station where he can conveniently buy and sell at short notice, he does well to keep to conservative issues—the 'blue chips,' some of which have paid dividends annually for fifty years or more. Certain businesses are more or less 'depression-proof' (as their performance in the early 1930's demonstrates). Other businesses are feast-or-famine propositions. In general, consumption-goods industries fluctuate in profits much less than heavy industry. Dividends on the stocks of tobacco companies, chain stores, dairies, and oil refineries tend to be relatively stable. The reverse is true of those companies manufacturing steel, automobiles, building supplies, etc. In general, it is common sense for the long term investor to prefer the first to the second.

"It's fine for an investor to 'get in on the ground floor of a company that's going places.' How often has it been pointed out that if you'd bought $1,000 worth of General Motors in 1920, you'd be rich now, or that the original holders of one share of Coca-Cola stock have a comfortable income now from that source alone? It's well to remember too, however, how many people lost their shirts in miscellaneous motors stock of companies long since bankrupt. Some investors are going to make a good thing out of television, but it's impossible to tell now which of the many companies in the field will hit the big bonanza. (And some investors have already lost heavily on at least one company.)

"Certain established industries still clearly offer growth possibilities. Chemicals are an example. This, however, is obvious to the investing public at large, and most chemical issues are (as compared to their dividend yield) relatively high-priced in today's market.

"On the whole, the amateur buying for income does well to confine his purchases to established issues which have done well in the past and which will, as far as can be guessed, continue to do as well in the future. In the long run, the man who shops for a safe stock paying 6 per cent does much better than the one who buys into a new company with the hope of doubling his money in six months.

"Is there an 'ideal common stock' for the average small investor who, like the typical naval officer, has neither the time nor impulse to make himself an expert on the market? Such a stock would have complete price stability and completely steady dividend rate. And there is no such stock. A certain irreducible minimum of risk is inherent in equity investment.

* "A Savings Program for the Naval Officer," an article by Associate Professor Roger Fredland, who teaches economics at the U. S. Naval Academy. The opinions or assertions in this article are the author's own and are not to be construed as official, or necessarily reflecting the views of the Naval Academy, the Navy Department, or the U. S. Naval Institute.

Two Firms Attack Bus Line Extension

Two bus companies yesterday told the District Public Utilities Commission they will lose money through its order extending two routes of one firm.

The court-ordered hearing resulted from a PUC decision last summer that ordered the Capital Transit Co. to extend its C-2 and W-4 lines up Alabama ave. se. to Pennsylvania ave. and 38th st. se., near Fairfax Village.

Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Lines, Inc., appealed the order to District Court here on the ground that (1) the order would take business from existing WM&A lines on Pennsylvania ave. se., and (2) WM&A had not had a chance to present its case at the PUC hearing. The District Court ordered the PUC to hear WM&A's case.

Yesterday, Roy A. Chew, traffic manager for WM&A, told the PUC his company would lose more than $29,000 a year if the two CTC bus routes are extended to Pennsylvania ave.

CTC, through Staff Engineer Dean J. Locke, objected to extension of the C-2 route on the ground that this would merely duplicate service offered by the other.

The hearing was continued until May 15 at 1:30 p. m. for further testimony.

Family Service a Scientific Plan, Agency Told

Family service agencies must realize they have a "five-alarm fire" on their hands and gear their operation to break a widespread social maladjustment

Penn

This is what Arthur H. Kruse, executive director of United Community Services, told the annual meeting of the Family Service Association yesterday at Barker Hall, YWCA.

He said such agencies must have a different kind of "citizen understanding of their program" to achieve adequate financial support.

Kruse said that no one knows what failure to do an adequate job of family service now costs.

Citing instances in Washington, Kruse pointed out that five percent of all children of school age in a single year become a community responsibility for foster protection at a $2,500,000 cost. One percent of the population, he said, requires institutional care for mental illness, at a $7,000,000 annual cost.

Another three percent of the population engages in some major crime, with an "out-of-pocket expense" of about $10,000,000 a year.

Kruse predicted that family service agencies must develop a "definite program of group education" in family problems to get a substantial increase in their financial support from the community.

Family Service Association members elected Charles T. Penn, vice president of the Indiana Limestone Corp., as their president for 1950, and heard Mrs. Mildred Kilinski, FSA director, describe agency efforts to give assistance to a mounting case load with staff cut back by budget shortage.

Among cases on which FSA worked during 1949, Mrs. Kilinski said, were 135 involving mental illness; 740 involving family relationships; 640 where individual personality adjustment was the problem; 220 where planning for substitute care of children was needed; 1303 persons who wanted economic assistance, and 641 who wanted employment.

The total number of families that used agency services during the year was 2213, Mrs. Kilinski said.

Washington Scientist, 74, To Wed Childhood Sweetheart

A 74-year-old Washington scientist and inventor today will marry a 69-year-old childhood sweetheart with whom he had lost touch for many years, he said yesterday.

The inventor, Clinton Root Foutz, left his home at 3800 Porter st. nw. yesterday for St. Petersburg, Fla., where he will marry Mrs. Florence Goddess Piper. They plan to live in Washington.

Foutz said he used to go with Mrs. Piper in Baltimore, their native city. Each married another, and they lost track of each other until last February. A friend of his met Mrs. Piper at that time in St. Petersburg, and, learning she was a native of Baltimore, asked if she knew Foutz.

A correspondence ensued between the widow and widower, and when she visited Washington last month, the marriage plans were made. They plan to live here. Foutz, a consulting engineer for many years, invented an engine cooling system and other devices.

Deafened Youngsters Show How to Overcome Handicap

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Washington's "unseen handicapped" were featured performers yesterday in day-long demonstrations of efforts to aid them.

They are the victims of hearing loss, the deafened whose handicap is not proclaimed by crutch, brace, distortion of palsy or other outward sign to tag them for public understanding.

Their handicap is that they live in a silent world within the normal world of speech, where learning, life and laughter are muffled in sound they either do not hear or cannot understand.

The deafened children yesterday claimed most attention at the auditorium of the Washington Gas Light Co. There, organizations concerned with hearing problems are sponsoring daily programs in current observance of National Hearing Week.

There, youngsters like petite Judy Burris, not yet 4, and sturdy Ira Hoskins, 3½, played toss on the stage with Instructor Rose Feilbach, watched her lips, and added new words to halting vocabularies.

"Throw." "Ball." "Hands." "Catch."

Judy and Ira, and other hearing class kiddies showed how color words are learned by those who cannot normally hear them spoken. And words of shape, and size, words of object and association, all words that other youngsters with average hearing ability learn in the normal process of growing up.

The show they put on was a familiar one to them. It was like their Saturday classes at the Washington Hearing Society. The students were those whose parents discovered they weren't hearing normally by checking on why they weren't learning to talk like kiddies their own age.

Purpose of the classes, explained Miss Ruth A. Hudnut, WHS executive director, is to salvage what hearing ability they do possess. Unused ears, she explained, become progressively useless.

Sound Waves Bombard Corn

of the wartime radar the experimenter, Karl Norris, thinks he may develop a method more efficient, more accurate and much less expensive than candling in at present.

7. Are testing use of ultrasonic waves to "tenderize" meats. So far, they admit, it hasn't "met with any degree of success."

The experiments are being conducted by the Division of Farm Electrification of the Bureau of Plant Industry. They are directed by Truman E. Hienton, formerly of Purdue University, where similar studies were started. The division works closely with the Rural Electrification Administration, although it is not a part of REA.

Two Russian scientists, O. Istomina and E. Ostrovskij, engaged in the treatment of seeds and plants with ultra-sonic vibrations 15 years ago. The American scientists at Beltsville are following a paper by the two Russians printed in 1936. The Russians reported they were able to increase potato yields from 16.7 percent to 68 percent.

The super-sonic machinery is the same as that used by the Navy in under-water communications and related subjects. One of the dealers in such machines, the Eimer and Amend Co., which handles apparatus made by the Fischer Scientific Co., of Pittsburgh, is now building a plant at Silver Spring, Md.

The corn experiments are being conducted by Lowell E. Campbell. Hybrid seed (United States No. 573) is being bombarded, under water, with sound vibrations of 400,000 cycles per second. (Frequencies from 16 to about 20,000 cycles per second may be sensed by the human ear. Above that they cannot be heard.) They are supposed to affect the genes and chromosomes in the seeds.

This year's experiments are, as far as the public is concerned, the first in the program. The workers admit, however, that the sound waves were tried out last year on hothouse radishes and cabbages. The only comment Campbell would make was that those experiments "proved nothing plus or minus to our satisfaction."

The ultrasonic experiments are among the subjects being revealed to a group of visiting agriculture specialists this week—the editors of the Extension Service of the Agriculture Department from a group of Southern States.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

EVER HEARD the mambo? You can—nightly—at the Blue Mirror, as played by Lisa Alonzo and her Tropicaires.

The mambo is a cross between the slow bolero and the faster rumba, Miss Alonzo says. It's a kind of South American bebop with lots of rhythmic ad libbing. The Tropicaires discovered the mambo in Florida and decided to help its migration northward this spring by adding it to their repertoire of Cuban, Mexican and American songs.

And then there's the guaracha, South American tempo slower than the mambo, but faster than the bolero. Lisa says the guaracha has been developing spontaneously in Florida, where the people are "all rumba-happy." If the Tropicaires have a mission in life, it is to spread the mambo and guaracha.

These are not the only innovations Lisa brings from Florida. Two years ago she began taking vibraphone lessons from Louis Batencourt, marimba expert, and now she mixes her vocal numbers with instrumentals on the "vibes." "Most units use the bibes for background," Lisa says, "but there is more to it than that. I use the vibes as a melody instrument—like the piano."

The Tropicaires are quick-change artists when they switch from Tin Pan Alley to south of the border stylings. The bass fiddler grabs the bongo drums, the drumer picks up the congo drum and the guitarist discards his pick and strums with fingers, Spanish style.

Millions Added for Defenses

since consideration started weeks ago, despite the demands for economy. As it stands now, the measure carries $29,496,238,000, compared with $29,045,030,000 when sent to the floor by the House Appropriations Committee.

Breakdown of Funds

All of the $385,360,000 added yesterday for national defense bore the indorsement of the Appropriations Committee and the Administration.

That total included: 200 million dollars for the Air Force to buy 77 additional planes and modernize 299 others; 100 million dollars for 95 more Navy planes; 50 million dollars for strengthening Navy antisubmarine forces; $24,235,000 for development and procurement of new Army weapons, largely anti-tank equipment; $11,125,000 more for operating Army and Navy hospitals.

Voting the additional Army money was unexpected. Secretary of Defense Louis Johnsn had mentioned that spending such funds was contemplated along with the boost in plane procurement and anti-submarine warfare forces, but said it could be carved out of savings.

Funds Would Buy 2381 Planes

At the same time, he asked restoration of the 203 million dollars pared out of 1951 budget by the House Appropriations Committee. The group gave back only $35,360,000 of this cut and earmarked it for the anti-tank program and operation of hospitals. Chairman George Mahon (D., Tex.) of the military spending subcommittee said yesterday a review of their earlier action had shown that the medical slash was "too sharp."

The bill now provides 2.3 billion dollars for Air Force and Navy plane procurement. This will buy 2,381 aircraft.

The Air Force will order 77 additional medium bombers, medium and heavy transports and helicopters, modernize 228 trainers and convert 71 B-29 bombers into tankers, with its additional 200 million dollars. They will have a total of $1,550,000,000 for buying 1460 new planes, tooling and conversions next year.

The additional Navy money will provide 76 more jet fighters and 19 patrol planes—a total of 912 under the 750 million dollars now allowed for new plane procurement. Four more destroyers can be operated, three motor minesweepers will be laid down and the modernization of 10 submarines and 129 destroyers and patrol vessels will be started under the antisubmarine warfare increase.

The Army funds provide for new type ammunition and artillery detector gear.

Congress Gets Security Plan

rejected by the Senate or House within 60 days, involve:

1. Transferring to Symington, the NSRB chairman, all the board powers now held jointly by the eight Cabinet-rank members of the NSRB. The board would become merely advisory to Symington.

2. Shifting RFC into the Commerce Department as a Government corporation under Secretary Sawyer's supervision. RFC now is an independent agency making loans to business.

3. Stripping from RFC its subsidiary corporation, the Federal National Mortgage Association, a multibillion-dollar-mortage-buying concern. This agency would be merged into the Housing and Home Finance Agency under Administrator Raymond M. Foley.

4. Transferring from RFC to Foley's agency the Government's function of making loans to aid the production and sale of prefabricated housing.

The proposals bring to a total of 25 the number of White House reorganization plans pending in Congress. Twenty-one will become law on May 23 unless rejected by either Senate or House. Resolutions opposing 11 of these have been filed.

Three D. C. Judges Go Payless

The three judges of the Municipal Court of Appeals went home payless yesterday because Congress has not acted on the District's $6,638,400 deficiency pay bill.

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said all other departments met yesterday's pay roll. But, he added, 5000 District employes will miss out on their pay May 23 if the bill is not passed by then, and school teachers will be hit if passage does not come by June 1.

The pay bill is now before the House Appropriations Committee. Committee sources last night said it "possibly" would reach the floor late this week but the "probable" guess was next week. It must wait for disposal of the omnibus appropriation bill, they said.

Officials at the Municipal Court of Appeals said their budget had been exhausted by (1) Last July's increase in the pay of the three judges—Chief Judge Nathan Cayton and Judges Andrew M. Hood and Brice Clagett—from $10,000 to $14,000 a year; (2) increase of all employes by $330 a year; (3) varying increases resulting from the 1949 Classification Act.

Good For The House

When cuts are made in the rivers and harbors appropriation and sustained by a house of Congress, it is more news than when a man bites a dog. We doff our hat to the House, which tentatively has pared the Army Engineer civil functions appropriation—largely river and flood control projects—by some 200 million dollars. In particular we salute Representative Pat Sutton, who had the courage and the statesmanship to ask that money for one project in his district of Tennessee be eliminated because studies were not complete.

This firm stand in the Committee of the Whole was in contrast to the action of the House several days earlier in upping the appropriation for merchant marine training by 75 percent. The amount of money involved was relatively small—only $5,886,000 in toto. But it is significant that the House ignored the recommendations of the President, the Bureau of the Budget and the Maritime Commission in adopting the Boggs amendment which, among other things, would reactivate two training schools now closed. Interestingly enough, a news story a few days earlier had reported that between one third and one half of American merchant seamen are out of work. Here was a chance for painless economy which the House muffed.

This very extravagance makes the rivers and harbors vote the more remarkable. Undoubtedly there are many worthwhile projects lumped together in this bill. If the United States were operating on a balanced budget, or if public works were needed as a stimulant, there would be justification for such developments as the Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway. But every legislator knows that the rivers and harbors bill is a favorite repository for all kinds of special interest political pork. Legislators also know well enough that many of these projects can be deferred or eliminated, and that 200 million dollars can be cut from the 834-million-dollar civil functions bill, as recommended by the Appropriations Committee, without injury.

Much of the credit for initiating the closer scrutiny which rivers and harbors appropriations have received belongs to Senator Paul Douglas. It was he who remarked not so long ago that being a liberal does not mean being a wastrel. That is sound sense which we think the voters would approve. Perhaps it is too much to hope that the Senate will assent to the rivers and harbors cut, but the House vote on Monday proves that miracles can happen, and that statesmanship is still available.

Issue In Loyalty

The letter from Theodore H. White appearing on this page today, together with Joseph Alsop's open letter to Senator Tydings, published here on Monday, illuminates the background of Senator McCarthy's wild State Department charges. These charges were focused on men whose views of Far Eastern policy differed from those entertained by Senator McCarthy and the China lobby. To the Senator, disagreement appears to be synonymous with disloyalty. His weapons of debate are vilification and abuse.

It is significant, however, that Mr. Alsop, who was himself a vigorous wartime proponent of aid to the Nationalist government of China, unreservedly defends the integrity and patriotism of the Far Eastern experts who took a position contrary to his own—the men who are now Senator McCarthy's targets. He thought, and still thinks, that Messrs. Lattimore, Service and Vincent were mistaken in certain respects. But, he says, "I never had the faintest doubt of the loyalty of any of the American officials whom McCarthy has attacked. They were serving the United States to the best of their ability, with courage and fidelity."

Mr. White makes the same point in respect of Mr. Service specifically; Demaree Bess, another noted newspaperman, made it in respect of Dr. Lattimore in testimony before the Tydings Subcommittee the other day. They defended not the opinions of the men whose good faith Senator McCarthy has impugned but the right—and indeed the duty—of these men to express independent opinions. In assailing this right and subverting the performance of this duty, Senator McCarthy hacks directly at the roots of the democratic process.

Mr. White puts it this way: "If Mr. Service is to be presently punished because he correctly reported that the Communists were less corrupt and more effective leaders than the mandarins of Chiang Kai-shek, the effect on younger officers in the State Department is easy to predict . . . No surer way exists for bolshevizing our foreign service on the blind Russian model." And Mr. Alsop, from an opposing point of view, observed that "we may as well abandon all hope of having honest and courageous public servants, if mere mistakes of judgment are later to be transformed into evidences of disloyalty to the state." The essence of the democratic process lies in the resolution of policy in terms of the merits, not the motives, of conflicting opinions.

Non-Communist Oath

The Supreme Court went to the vitals of constitutional law in upholding the non-Communist oath of the Taft-Hartley Act. The question was whether the guarantee of freedom of speech in the First Amendment should prevent Congress from exercising its power over interstate commerce so as to exclude Communists from the leadership of labor unions seeking aid from the NLRB. While recognizing that the non-Communist oath requirement does discourage the use of free speech, a 5-to-1 majority held that Congress had the right to impose that indirect restraint in the national interest.

Of course, this does not mean that in a straight-out clash between freedom of speech and the control of commerce, the commerce power would predominate. But the Constitution does give Congress broad power to shield interstate commerce from burdens and dangers. Congress saw such a danger in the "political strike," which is a commonplace weapon of Communists. Speaking for the court, Chief Justice Vinson said that Congress was free to legislate against this danger, and it could take note of the fact that the Communist Party, unlike all other parties, constitutes a particular threat to our economy. It was Justice Jackson who supplied the most convincing reasoning on this point.

> . . . the Communist Party [he said] is a conspiratorial and revolutionary junta, organized to reach ends and to use methods which are incompatible with our constitutional system . . . It purposes forcibly to recast our whole social and political structure after the Muscovite model of police-state dictatorship . . . The Communist Party alone among American parties past or present is dominated and controlled by a foreign government . . . The most promising course of the Communist Party has been the undercover capture of the coercive power of strategic labor unions as a leverage to magnify its power over the American people . . . I cannot believe that Congress has less power to protect a labor union from Communist Party domination than it has from employer domination.

Chief Justice Vinson went on to emphasize that the non-Communist oath provision does not interfere with speech because Congress fears the consequences of speech. Rather, the provision is aimed directly at action—political strikes. The right of legislatures to restrict obnoxious and dangerous activities involving speech has long been recognized, as when the court upheld restraints upon blaring sound trucks and unauthorized parades. In the latter case Chief Justice Hughes said: "Civil liberties, as guaranteed by the Constitution, imply the existence of an organized society maintaining public order without which liberty itself would be lost in the excesses of unrestrained abuses." It is necessary to remember that the effect of the decision is not to cut off any Communist's right to speak but only to minimize his power to cripple the Nation's economy. However unwise the policy adopted by Congress may be, the court could not properly let such minor repercussions upon free speech cripple Congress in dealing with the ever-present Communist conspiracy.

When it comes to the second portion of the oath required of the leaders of unions using NLRB machinery, we think the dissenters had the better arguments. This section is intended to keep out of union office any person who "believes in" overthrow of the Government by illegal or unconstitutional methods. Three members of the court drew no distinction between this "belief" provision and the other section having to do with membership in the Communist Party. To do so they had to put a very lenient interpretation on the statute. While they also gave a virtual guarantee that mere belief would not be penalized "while this court sits," it seems to us that the more logical action would have been to strike down this encroachment upon thought.

"Thought control," as Justice Jackson said, in his partial dissent, "is a copyright of totalitarianism, and we have no claim to it. It is not the function of our Government to keep the citizen from falling into error; it is the function of the citizen to keep the Government from falling into error." Subversive thoughts and beliefs can be dealt with when and if they are manifested in action that Congress has a right to protect society against. With the court divided three to three on this secondary point, there is reason to hope that the Jackson-Frankfurter-Black view will prevail when it can be considered by a full court.

Policy In Indo-China

The first fruit of the European conference looks like another case study of what we meant the other day in writing of the harm that flows from entering into commitments without benefit of policy. American arms are to be shipped to Indo-China. Whether the purpose is to insure victory and complete independence of the Bao Dai government, to confirm the existing French overlordship of that government, or to ease France out of the dilemma there—this question cannot be answered from the Acheson announcement. Perhaps a policy was cleared with the foreign affairs committees of Congress before Mr. Acheson left Washington. This was essential in this case in view of the problem in appropriations. For the relatively puny aid that has been pledged in Paris will come out of the 75 million dollars appropriated last year "for the general area of China," and besides has to be spent by the end of the fiscal year. It is assumed in Paris, with or without warrant, that Congress will then be asked for more money, and that no questions will be raised.

Without an understanding of what, if any, policy has been embarked upon, the problem may be reviewed. The Bao Dai government since last year has enjoyed a quasi-independence in the French union. It is trying under French direction of its diplomacy and its army to subdue the Communist-led guerillas under Ho Chi-minh. When this country recognized Bao Dai in February, it was assumed that the act would bolster the government's stock with Viet Namese. Nothing of the sort happened. All that Ho did was to point to the strings held by the French as evidence that Bao Dai was still a French puppet, and any drift to Bao Dai ceased. Since then three of Bao Dai's "concentrated" cabinet of six have resigned on the grounds that the people had no confidence in the government. An effort is being made to "requisition" successors. The blunt fact is that were it not for the French forces Ho Chi-minh would sweep the country. As it is, his guerillas control a larger area of Viet Nam territory than Bao Dai does.

Here are the dimensions of the problem in Indo-China. If there is no policy back of the Paris decision, it is a gamble, and it may rear back as disastrously to our stock in Asia and our diplomacy as the abortive military intervention in China did. That, in the eyes of the Republican "isolationists," was "too little and too late," and, presumably, they want, in Indo-China, to make sure that the new adventure succeeds in ending the threat to Bao Dai. The question in our minds is whether this has become the policy, and whether, if it has, Congress had all the facts at its disposal in consenting to it. Just to plug a hole here and there or apply a poultice is not the way to exercise leadership.

Truman At Lincoln

It is significant that President Truman elected to give the first major speech of his "nonpolitical" tour at Lincoln, Nebr. That is in the area where farmers have begun to grumble about price declines, and it is not far from the region where blowing dust and insects have seriously damaged the winter wheat crop. Mr. Truman's remarks thus can be taken as a preview of the Administration's campaign to retain the farm vote. Not surprisingly at all, that campaign is based on the something-for-everybody formula of the Brannan Plan. Evidently the Administration is relying on price declines to bring farmer pressure on legislators who so far have refused to take the plan seriously.

A lot of nonsense has been written about the Brannan Plan, and the President had a point in decrying the charges of "regimentation." Any governmental program necessitates some controls, and it is the lack of sufficient controls that has in part been responsible for the disgraceful potato glut. Nevertheless, it is undeniable that the Brannan Plan would bring more direct dependence on the Government for farm income. That may not be regimentation, but it is scarcely the way to bring about greater control by farmers of their own destinies—a point Mr. Truman dwells upon. Moreover, the more governmental control there is, the more disastrous can be the effects of misjudgment—and that is where the possibility of ruinous cost comes in.

Most interesting is the President's reference, with apparent alarm, to the fact that farm prices have fallen 20 percent in the last two years. It is quite true that if farm prices were to plummet, it would be difficult to stave off a depression in the rest of the economy. Nevertheless, Mr. Truman speaks of price declines as if the highs of two years ago were normal. In point of fact, they were all-time highs occasioned by tremendous foreign demand, and what has taken place since is largely healthy readjustment.

It is on this point that the Brannan Plan runs into perhaps its greatest difficulty. In light of technological advances, new seeds and fertilizers and changes in farm patterns, many farm products are simply not worth even what they cost today. Yet under the Brannan Plan many of the support levels would be even higher than under the present system. In other words, instead of bringing flexibility in supports, the Brannan Plan would compound the rigidity by giving permanency to overvaluations. Consumption of perishables might be stimulated by lower prices to consumers—made up by Government payments to farmers charged against the taxpayers—and some overproduction might be checked by quotas. But it is hard to see how the shifts in production, better soil conservation and stimulus to more efficient farming the President talks about could be attained under a system which would make it more profitable for inefficient marginal producers to stay in business.

Break With Precedent

The election to the presidency of the United States Chamber of Commerce of Otto A. Seyferth, former labor union organizer and present head of a steel foundry company, upsets all precedent. To be sure, a good many leaders of industry have been recruited from the ranks and are, no doubt, more efficient executives because they have first-hand knowledge of the problems of working men. Sometimes, however, the very qualities that singled them out for promotion make them indifferent, if not hostile, to labor unions primarily concerned to better the condition of the average worker, perhaps to the disadvantage of the exceptionally proficient individual. Mr. Seyferth has had an opportunity to acquaint himself with the virtues and defects of labor organizations, and his counsel should prove extremely helpful to businessmen whose value to their companies will be enhanced by a better understanding of labor's needs and organizational problems.

Atomic Strategy

The May 5 communication on atomic war strategy from members of the faculties at Harvard and Massachusetts Institute of Technology deserved more attention than its obscure position would achieve.

It is a striking thing that this significant analysis, which probes the many dangerous weaknesses of our present reliance on strategic bombing and the atom bomb, should come from a group of quiet intellectuals far from the hurly-burly of Washington. It is even fair to wonder if such a clear-thinking piece could have come out of Washington at all. Here, with all the myopia imposed by specialization, the harassment of policy-makers by administrative demands, the pressure of politics, and the instinctive tendency to think in these terms, such a bold and searching analysis is not likely to be formulated.

But it is singularly fortunate that enlightened amateurs with the first-class minds should muddy the all-too-tranquil waters of inertia and fuzzy-thinking that seem to prevent the United States from coming to grips with the military realities now being so starkly revealed. Certainly the communication from these men deserves the closest attention of those responsible for formulating our national strategy. It is even possible to hope that a responsible official will see fit to make public comment on the important issues raised in this letter.

"Barbarian Invasion"

I enjoyed your May 3 editorial on Mr. Lattimore's reply to the Budenz charges. While I was reading it, it occurred to me that you might have something further to say regarding some remarks in the New Yorker magazine for April 22.

There, on page 101, Richard H. Rovere has this to say: "One genuine innovation of recent weeks . . . is a device that seems to have been hit upon by Senator McCarthy while he was preparing his weird campaign and that might be described as the multiple untruth . . . Hitler once boasted that he was the leading exponent of the big lie—the falsehood so large and round that it could be mistaken for truth because of its very audacity and magnitude . . . The "multiple untruth" need not be a particularly large untruth but can be instead a long series of loosely related untruths, or a single untruth with many facets.

"In either case, the whole is composed of so many parts that anyone wishing to set the record straight will discover that it is utterly impossible to keep all the elements of the falsehood in mind at the same time. Anyone making the attempt may seize upon a few selected statements and show them to be false, but doing this may leave the impression that only the statements selected are false and the rest true. An even greater advantage of the multiple untruth is that statements shown to be false can still be repeated over and over again with impunity, because no one will remember which statements have been disproved . . ."

This statement strikes me as being the clearest and most concise description of the recent shenanigans that has yet been made.

Transit Hearings

After attending hearings on the Capital Transit request for fare increases, I was very much interested in the whole proceedings and particularly noticed how all concerned were treated by the Public Utilites Commission. Contrary to the general opinion, my impression was that the PUC was not inclined to agree with all requests made by Capital Transit. Not once during the course of the entire hearing was there any indication to this observer that it was a "cut and dried" affair.

I favor keeping the weekly pass at $1.75, raising the tokens to six for 80 cents and the cash fare to 15 cents. However, to make sure that the weekly pass will not be abused, the hours should be shorter and the pass only good between 5 a. m. and 6:30 p. m.

"Who Lost China?"

Your May 4 editorial on "Who Lost China" should make cloyingly extravagant reading, conjuring up as it did the specter of "China cult," plus a puerile conception of "China's absorption of America" once the Americans got themselves involved. Indeed, it is perfectly correct to say that the loss of China is no concern of this country—if viewed through an isolationist periscope. But I have yet to meet the "supple and gifted representatives of China" whom you have credited with exercising high diplomatic skill in suggesting the "American responsibility for China." Common sense would seem to tell that if they were "gifted" at all, they would not be so fatuous and tactless as to resort to such a self-defeating measure.

Indeed, all right-minded Americans and Chinese are concerned about this "Sino-American nexus." But what is conducive to a better future is sanity and vision in all of us, and certainly not a single-minded wish for a quick perfect death of the Nationalists, for that death would rather complicate than solve the momentous problem in that part of the world. Therefore, it seems to me that you would do a great service to the reading public if you filled your page with some constructive ideas instead of repeating again and again these dreary old platitudes, almost too old to be ghosts.

John Service's Loyalty

As one closely associated with American military headquarters in China during the great events of 1944-1945, I feel that I can scarcely avoid the duty of bearing witness to the character and record of Mr. John Service of the State Department, now so disputed a matter of public controversy.

As a war correspondent I was attached to Gen. Joseph Stilwell's headquarters throughout the war years. I write now because General Stilwell, who could best testify to Mr. Service's loyal services to the Republic, is dead; other officials who could similarly testify have been frightened into silence, and the corps of newsmen accredited to the war in Asia are scattered all over our country and across the globe.

Early in the war the State Department assigned to General Stilwell's staff a number of political intelligence officers to aid him in the tricky politics of the war theater for which he was responsible. Service was among these men, subject to military orders and discipline.

It was under the direct orders of General Stilwell that Service made his roving trips to north China and the China front, under conditions of immense hardship and great personal danger. And again, under General Stilwell's orders, that he was sent in the summer of 1944 to Chinese Communist headquarters in Yenan to learn and report back what he found.

In Yenan, the then Communist capital, Mr. Service succeeded in establishing himself in the confidence and affection of the Communist leaders. Speaking Chinese flawlessly, subjecting himself to the same bitter and exhausting conditions of life they did, he won their trust. They made available to our mission in Yenan, combat information, vital against the Japanese, which saved numberless American lives. They further accepted Mr. Service as a friendly emissary and exposed to him, and to our Government, all their hopes, plans and strength.

Having been a foreign correspondent now for 12 years, and having reported on American statecraft from every part of the world, I should like to bear witness that Mr. Service's skill in winning Communist confidence remains in my experience an unmatched performance. Mr. Service reported out of Yenan to our Government what no other American political service officer was ever after to deny: that the Chinese Communists were tougher, abler, more vigorous people than the corrupt government of Chiang Kai-shek; I submit that this was, in retrospect, first-class reporting.

I can testify from several personal conversations with Mr. Service that he was never, at any moment, carried away by the sweetness-and-light theory of the Chinese Communists, then so prevalent. And that he recognized them for what they were—cold, shrewd, vigorous power-seeking men.

I believe that Mr. Service's case poses a fundamental issue of our Foreign Service: Shall a reporting officer's reports be tempered to conform with the prejudices of his superiors or the dominant prejudices of Congress at the moment? Or shall he report unpalatable political facts coldly?

If Mr. Service is to be presently punished because he correctly reported that the Communists were less corrupt and more effective leaders than the mandarins of Chiang Kai-shek, the effect on younger officers in the State Department is easy to predict.

The Foreign Service is now crowded with junior officers inducted shortly after the war. I feel certain that if they come to believe that the bearer of unhappy tidings is to be beheaded for the news he bears, they will increasingly temper their reporting of the world abroad to make it fit with what domestic passion believe it to be. No surer way exists for bolshevizing our Foreign Service on the blind Russian model.

I do not know what charges have been made or will be made against Mr. Service. But I can testify that he served the Republic bravely, brilliantly, and in great hardship; he deserves its praise and honor.

Warning On Crime Pattern

By Malvina Lindsay

Youthful Violence

AN 18-YEAR-OLD youth who has confessed to the brutal murder of two department store guards in Washington is a symbol and a warning of a developing pattern of crime in this country.

Here is the youthful criminal again, his deed another example of the "astonishing crimes of violence by youth" on which visiting foreign jurists often comment. Here is the boy who quit school to work—a type becoming a major worry of high school educators—and who, unskilled and of irresponsible work habits, drifted from one small job to another, being a porter in a tea room, a helper in restaurants, a driver of a delivery truck.

Here is the youth who got involved in petty pilfering and housebreaking, the "small crimes" that J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI, says "generally precede great crimes." Here is a boy who out of a job and presumably wanting money the easier way branched out into an attempted robbery of a department store.

THIS YOUTH may have some particular hidden weakness that explains the brutality he manifested in this "great crime," and which so greatly surprised his parents and neighbors. But the question remains: How many potential criminals of this type are developing among the hordes of high school drop-outs and teen-age drifters unable by skill or stamina to earn the money to get the "things" our civilization emphasizes?

About half the Nation's high school students drop out before they finish their course. Now employment pincers are closing in on these half-baked job seekers. Many of these leave home for greener pastures. Thousands of youths throughout the country are becoming this Nation's displaced persons, it was brought out at a recent meeting of the National Probabtion and Parole Association. In their wanderings from city to city they often have to bed with derelicts in flop houses, seasoned criminals in jails.

Or these youths at loose ends may remain at home, as did William Tyler—the youth known as "Junior"—leading lives of which their busy parents are unaware. Homes and neighborhoods, as well as high schools and cities, seem unprepared to cope with the teen-age drifter.

But typical as the Tyler boy is in some ways of today's youth without moorings, he cannot be explained by generalizations—not even by that old standby, the broken home. His home, a fairly comfortable one, was intact physically. His mother worked but it was at night when his father was at home. His parents insist he "had what he needed." To know what impelled his outbreak of savagery one would have to explore deeply into his history and personality.

WHY DID he quit junior high school? Was it for the usual reasons drop-outs give—wanting to make money, not getting anywhere, bored? And what can the high school do to keep youths from dropping out? How can parents give their children the stability to finish what they start? Who is to blame for the thousands of young "displaced persons" for whom there seem to be no legitimate niches and who are tempted to drift into illegitimate ways of getting what they want? Is it the school system, the parents, society?

Probably all of these, for as Howard A. Lane, professor of education at New York University, says, "A delinquent child is the failure of many persons and institutions in his life."

It is easy to say that this country's growing army of half-educated and untrained youth would be no menace if parents would "teach them what is right," or in more modern terms, give them emotional stability. But how many parents are prepared to do this? How many parents are not the victims of ignorance and of the frustration and handicaps given them by their parents?

The public is just beginning to understand that preventing the William Tylers involves among other things making marriage and the rearing of children something more than a hit-and-miss affair. Dr. Henry Bowman, of Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., expressed this recently when the Protestant Council of New York announced a series of marriage education films based on his book, Marriage for Moderns. "Two dollars and 15 minutes are all that is needed to set up a home under the law," he said, "whereas long training, education, understanding and patience are required to make a successful marriage."

Movie Tax

Inasmuch as it is barely possible that the law eliminating or reducing Federal taxes on moving picture theater admissions may be passed, your excellent newspaper would be of great service to its readers who are patrons of the theaters if it would recommend to its readers that they note the present varying admission prices carefully. Then, in the event the proposed legislation became operative, they could give their custom to those theater managers who passed the tax reduction on to their customers, instead of to those who increased their prices to cover all or part of the tax reduction.

Losing Europe?

By Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber

I. Preface To London

Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber is a special correspondent of Le Monde of Paris now on a Smith-Mundt fellowship in this country. Twenty-six years old, he served as a pilot in the Free French air force, and then enjoyed a meteoric rise to fame as a journalist. His articles rebutting the European idea of "neutralization" brought discussions with Prime Minister Bidault and Foreign Minister Schuman.

IF BY 1955 Europe is lost to Stalinism in the cold war—as China was in 1950—those who will hunt for the first origins of this new defeat should be able to find them in the events of the two weeks preceding this London Conference. The way Europe will fall, if ever, will probably be different from China's fall. But the sparkplug of both defeats will probably have been the same, via this principle: "To save a country from Stalinism it is enough to distribute dollars and arms."

This is false because the cold war is primarily a political war. However, in the last two weeks, a behind-the-scenes dialogue, based on that false principle, has taken place between Washington and Europe—a dialogue which has just ended in an Atlantic defeat in the political war. A defeat of immeasurable consequences if not exposed publicly before the Ministers meet in London. This episode is, roughly speaking, "l'affaire Bidault."

THREE weeks ago French Prime Minister Bidault offered a proposal to the Atlantic nations: to create together a permanent "Atlantic Council" responsible for planning a common policy. He was thus proposing to tighten the bonds between Europe and America, to coordinate their plans on the economic and political levels as well as on the military.

The reaction in France and the other European countries has been heated and divided. On one side, all who put their hope in the unification of the Atlantic world in front of the Soviet world, reacted with enthusiasm. The European ministers who were meeting in The Hague on the same day, immediately approved the French proposal.

On the other side, the Communists and all rightists and leftists who want a "neutral" Europe between Washington and Moscow, were violently opposed and called Bidault an "American stooge." A first result was thus achieved: the friends and foes of a true Atlantic community were counted clearly. And this proposal, moreover, in giving constructive hope, attracted to the Atlantic camp many who had hesitated. Then everybody turned toward America to watch for her answer.

The American administration was officially silent and unofficially very cool. Discouragement descended upon the partisans of the Atlantic Community and their adversaries took immediate advantage of it. The neutralists started a new campaign more violent than ever in Germany, France and Italy. They declared this was proof that America would oppose any attempt at true political partnership, that she wanted to lead the cold war alone in exchange for the dollars she distributes. In France, for instance, a well-known professor explained on the front page of Le Monde that from then on neutrality was the best policy. And General de Gaulle declared more forcefully than ever before that Europe should keep away from both America and Russia.

THE POLITICAL consequences of the cool American attitude have been so far-reaching that French Foreign Minister Schuman made what can be considered a first retreat in an official speech. He declared that this "Atlantic Council" should not be truly Atlantic but should become a sort of little United Nations and include the neutral countries. That already takes away the main point of the proposal. But even this appeared too risky in view of the continuing lack of backing from Washington.

And finally the French government unofficially announced that because of the cool attitude of the United States, the French proposal would not even be put on the agenda of the London meeting. The "neutralists," formerly shaken, now rejoice that the whole thing seems to have turned in their favor.

Argument could go on at length about the responsibilities. Maybe France has not made a sufficient effort to make her proposal clear to the American public. Maybe England aided in confusing the issue to stall for time in order to state her position later. This discussion is futile. What counts now is that the London meeting, starting Thursday, can still repair the harm done and give basis again for the hope of political unity in the West. So it is necessary to make clear why, in European eyes, the necessity for political partnership is urgent.

WHAT IS the essence of the cold war in Europe? In other words, what is the political aim of the Communist propaganda and action? It is generally believed, outside Europe, that the aim of the Communists in Europe is to rally the greatest number of partisans favorable to the Soviet Union. It is not so. They found out two years ago that that would not lead them very far.

Their new tactics are shrewder and more efficient: the aim is to reduce by any possible means the number of partisans favorable to America. The aim, in other words, is not to try and make people love Russia but to make them hate America. For if and when they succeed in making Europe "neutral" militarily, politically and economically, it will then fall by itself, like a ripe fruit, in the Soviet camp.

These are shrewd tactics because they can use both the fellow-travelers of the left and the nationalists of the right. And, this "Anti-Atlantic" political force represents between 40 and 50 percent of the public opinion in any European country—France, Germany or Italy. The danger is serious and the struggle is on.

But in view of the confusion and inefficiency of the present official cooperation between the Atlantic nations, the "neutralist" propaganda is really child's play. On the one hand, the Atlantic community appears primarily to be a machine for military preparation, resulting in grave psychological consequences in Europe. On the other hand, the six or seven ministers' committees (three Atlantic, Brussels, Marshall Plan, Strasbourg, Big Three . . .) are incapable of planning a common policy, for each sees only one aspect of the problems, and they meet only four or five days a year.

As a result the only real policy-planning appears to be done in Washington and then discussed bilaterally between Washington and each European capital; under this process the Europeans have the disagreeable feeling of being "semi-satellized." On top of it all reigns a great confusion and the decisions taken by each are separate, nationalistic and uncoordinated.

THESE three aspects—emphasis on military preparation, impression of semi-satellization, and confusion of policies—are a remarkable help to the Communist propaganda and the political appeal of a neutralist policy. If this state of affairs continues, the "pro-Atlantic" political group, representing today a little more than half of the public opinion in Europe, will become smaller and smaller. And if the day comes when it will become a minority, America will either have to give orders to the European countries—both impractical and contrary to her principles or accept a neutral Europe—a definite reversal of the balance of forces in the cold war.

It is to avoid this possible and lethal dilemna, while there is still time, that France has proposed the creation of an Atlantic policy planning commission. Its aim is not to be an executive body but an organism to make the issues clear, study the problems under their different aspects and to propose common solutions. This can hardly be considered a revolutionary step. But the future of the world political war may depend on whether such a step will be taken during the London meeting. The Atlantic community is now at the crossroad.

The Hate Chorus

By Marquis Childs

Acheson Persuaded To Stay

IT IS a strange commentary on the times that on one side of the stage in the present drama of foreign policy—war or peace—is the same cast of characters that played the same role in the years immediately preceding World War II. They might be called the hate chorus.

Childs

They are a weird blend of ex-this and ex-that; of chi-chi individuals who cling to the "social" label and very important Republicans. In 1938 and beyond they were in America First and they hated Roosevelt.

This time they consider the President beneath their contempt. Their hate and their malice are concentrated on Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

At a charming little dinner party given by a soloist in the hate chorus recently, Acheson's resignation was gleefully predicted even down to the number of days preceding the date on which he would be forced out of office. The prophet in this instance was one of the oddest characters in the group who has since been removed from the payroll of the Central Intelligence Agency; the last being an eventuality that may have been hastened by the fact his name was on one of Senator McCarthy's lists.

How much this prophecy derived from wishful thinking, compounded with psychopathology of a complicated nature, probably only a good psychiatrist could determine. But, in actual fact, the event this crew have so worked for and longed for came closer to happening than they could have known.

NOT LONG before he left for the series of European conferences now in progress Acheson called on the President. The prolonged and nagging quarrel in Congress with all its savagery had deeply depressed him. He had a heartsick feeling that perhaps his usefulness was at an end.

While it has been for the most part outside the scope of the news, Acheson has in recent months been under a great personal strain in addition to everything else. One of his two daughters, Mrs. William P. Bundy, has been undergoing a series of major operations in connection with a grave illness.

This may have been one of the reasons why, as he told the President, he felt he could not and should not continue as Secretary of State. The President's response was immediate and unequivocal. He replied that whatever Acheson's personal wishes might be, he could not resign.

The President went on to say that he understood Acheson's feelings very well. To serve in high office in times like these was to take personal abuse of an unprecedented nature. But under the circumstances there was no choice but to go on. It was a duty not merely to people here at home but to free people everywhere.

You've got to stay here, Dean, and fight both the Communists and the Republicans, the President is reported to have said in conclusion.

THE PRESIDENT was in a fighting mood and he conveyed to his Secretary of State something of this same fiery determination. Acheson left for Paris feeling better about the struggle to maintain some unity of policy at home and the struggle to maintain some unity of purpose among the Western allies in Europe.

There was, of course, not a little politics behind the President's pep talk. He well knows that Acheson's resignation, no matter what the real motives, would be taken by the McCarthy-Wherry-Taft wing of the Republican Party as a victory and everything would be done to make it appear as a confession of guilt.

Between the President and his Secretary of State it seemed to be settled that there would be no change—certainly not before the elections of November 7. This means that there is not likely to be any change in or expansion of policy. And it is just here that one comes to the crux of the tragedy.

The policy being pursued today is not big enough or bold enough in relation to the threat of total war; a threat that seems to grow more real and more imminent with each day that passes. Both in theory and in practice the policy of containing communism through strength is inadequate. The policy of strength should be related to a far-reaching peace offensive carried to all peoples everywhere.

Perhaps no course whatsoever can avert destruction. But if there were an all-out effort to avert it, then at least there would be the satisfaction on the day it happened that everything humanly possible had been done on our side to prevent it.

Ewing Resists Rehabilitation Office Transfer

Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing yesterday voiced strong objection to a proposal for shifting the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation from his department to the Labor Department.

The chief argument for the proposal is based on the fact that the Federal Employment Service is in the Labor Department, and that finding a job is the objective of rehabilitation programs, Ewing said.

But, Ewing charged, the argument—backed by Labor Secretary Maurice J. Tobin, is fallacious, a case of "the tail wagging the dog."

Testifying before a Senate Labor Subcommittee, Ewing declared:

of education, health and security;

"Employment, in the last analysis, is the end-product of rehabilitation only in the same sense that employment is the end-product of education.

"Virtually every high school and college student looks forward to work of some kind. The Employment Service, at some point in their lives, may very well help them find work as it may do for some of the handicapped. But surely we must not infer that therefore the Office of Education ought to be transferred to the Department of Labor."

Neither a "Welfare approach" nor an "employment approach" is the key to helping the Nation's handicapped, Ewing said.

The key word, he added, is "rehabilitation", which encompasses counsel and guidance in the fields of education, health and security; medical examination and services; specialized vocational training; special programs for handicapped children; financial assistance to the needy blind, etc.

The Federal Security Administration is already successfully coordinating such activities for the handicapped, Ewing said, and the way to help the disabled more, is to expand the FSA's program.

Fulbright Says RFC Heads Try to Usurp Congress' Job

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) sharply criticized officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. yesterday and accused them of trying to take over the job of Congress to decide policies.

The outburst came at a hearing of a Senate Banking subcommittee headed by Fulbright. The group is looking into the lending policies of the Government loan agency.

Fulbright addressed his remarks to RFC Director Harvey Gunderson, who was on the witness stand at the time. The Senator told Gunderson the committee would get the facts and Congress would decide about interest rates on loans and other matters "whether you like it or not."

"It's none of your business," Fulbright added.

Fulbright Sees a Loss

Shortly before, Gunderson had protested that committee staff workers under Fulbright had gone "too far from the facts."

For two days the subcommittee has been listening to an accountant's argument about whether RFC had a profit or loss in the postwar years.

Fulbright has indicated he believes are agency actually had a los and was able to report a profit only because it had not counted interest costs on Treasury funds used to make RFC loans.

If these costs had been included, Fulbright and his staff members indicated RFC would have been forced to charge higher interest rates. Gunderson protested that RFC had done just what Congress had directed it to do.

10 Percent Carried the Rest

Fulbright observed that RFC profits from its big loans had been used to carry or subsidize smaller loans. Gunderson broke in to say that was "true right across the board" on RFC loans.

"Ten percent of the loans carry the cost of 90 percent," Gunderson said. "It has to be if RFC is going to make small loans."

Gunderson added that it's up to Congress whether a different policy is to be followed.

Theodore Herz, a committee accountant, testified that only the Richmond, San Francisco and Washington offices of RFC showed a profit last year.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Facts Of Life

LONDON.—At the opening of the historic London meeting, two facts dominate all others. First, all the solutions of all the other vital problems directly depend upon finding a satisfactory solution of the central problem of Western defense. Second, there is no earthly way to solve the defense problem, unless Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson is ready to commit the Administration to sponsoring a much greater American effort.

These, so to speak, are the basic facts of life of this meeting on which the whole future of the Western world now depends. Ignoring them is like believing that babies are found under cabbage leaves.

The great drama of the crisis of conscience and policy in Washington had not been played out before Acheson sent his highest subordinates to London to prepare the ground for the main meeting. Because the extent of American effort has been uncertain, everything else is still uncertain. But it is important to note that if we are ready to play our part, the defense job can be done.

It is possible to state categorically that the defense job can be done, for the simple reason that the responsible leaders have at last got down to brass tacks. The time of fiddle faddle is over. Everyone has come to grips with realities. The best symbol of this development is a vital step that has been taken here in the last week.

UNTIL NOW one of the great difficulties of organizing a Western defense has arisen from the peculiar Anglo-Franco-American relationship. Since the war, the British and Americans have always been linked most closely, in a special relationship that used to be formally expressed by the Combined Chiefs of Staff. With the signature of the Atlantic Pact, the Combined Chiefs were officially transformed into the so-called Atlantic Pact Standing Group, headed by Gen. Omar Bradley and including the French.

However, for such obvious reasons as the retention of Prof. Joliot-Curie as France's atomic energy chief, the French were in fact not accepted as full partners. Since France had to provide most of the ground forces for Western defense, the position was hopelessly anomalous. The removal of Prof. Joliot-Curie and other steps recently taken in Paris have now opened the way for reform. The Atlantic Pact Standing Group can now be reconstituted as a true Combined Chiefs of Staff of the cold war. The decision to do this has already been taken.

In other ways, also, old illusions have been destroyed. As has previously been recorded in this space, the earlier planning for Western defense was found to be grossly unrealistic at the Brussels conference. The Hague agreement, so loudly heralded by Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson, was briskly torn up and thrown into the waste basket at Brussels by the representatives of Britain, France and Benelux. The European nations could not pay for the plans that the defense ministers and chiefs of staff had approved at The Hague.

BUT THIS again was a gain, in the sense that facts were being faced. The directive sent from Brussels to the Atlantic Pact standing group was another gain. It demanded a new kind of planning, beginning with the hard requirements for an effective air defense, an effective ground defense, and so on; and going on from there to the share each nation should play in meeting these requirements.

It is utterly impossible to exaggerate the seriousness of the situation which must now be taken in hand. For example, the Soviet Union is monthly increasing its stock of atomic bombs and building up its strategic air force. Yet virtually the whole air defense of Western Europe consists of the air warning system and fighter squadrons in the British Isles. Funds must be found for a great western European radar screen, for a great increase of western European fighter strength, for great numbers of antiaircraft guns and guided missiles, for emplacements or bases for all these weapons, and for men to use them.

The task is heavy, but since the facts have been faced at last, we can now get on with the work. Three things should come out of this London meeting. First, some means should be found to make sure that the plans prepared by the new Combined Chiefs of Staff are actually carried out—that the needed weapons are produced and the needed men are recruited and trained.

Second, it should be agreed that there will be no further delays for budgetary reasons. The American contribution must therefore be increased to cover the European deficit, at least for the time being. Third, since the largest contribution will thus be ours, we must accept the leading role. The French, the British and all the other Atlantic Pact nations have long been urging us to "join the party and take command," as they say here. There must now be something like an American supreme commander of the West.

IF ALL this is done, the hard work of planning and preparation can be completed in the next months. The even harder work of a greatly increased defense effort can begin thereafter when the new American and European budgets are made. It will be terribly late, but not too late.

If all these things are not done, on the other hand, two sets of consequences can be foreseen. On the one hand, the Europeans will make no serious effort to defend themselves, since they know they can accomplish little without a major American contribution, going far beyond the surplus arms shipments of this summer. On the other hand, it also will prove impossible to solve the Far Eastern problem, or the problem of Germany, or the problem of better political organization of the Western world.

The defense problem is by no means the whole of each of these other problems, but it enters into every one of them. No great and painful efforts, such as are now necessary, can possibly be hoped for, if the defense problem is unsolved. Such a series of failures at London will, in turn, mean the beginning of the end for the Western world. It is therefore to be hoped that Secretary Acheson has been given the widest authority by President Truman.

Economic Guardians Are Found Remiss

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney's Joint Committee on the Economic Report has been so busy investigating steel prices that nobody seems to have missed the one report it is by law required to make.

The Employment Act of 1946 set up two bodies to take the economic pulse of the nation. One was the three-man Council of Economic Advisers, whose job it is to study trends and assist the President in drawing up an annual program for "maximum employment, production and purchasing power."

The other was the 14-man Joint Committee of House and Senate, which is required, not later than March 1 of each year, to "file a report with the Senate and House of Representatives containing its findings and recommendations with respect to each of the main recommendations made by the President."

The calendar now shows May, but there has been no report. Instead we have had an investigation of steel prices. Can it be that the foxhunt has missed the spoor and is busy chasing rabbits?

Much Conflict

Weak and unsatisfactory as the Employment Act itself is, the performance by all concerned has been even less satisfactory.

First there was the internal dissension which long wracked the Council of Economic Advisers and finally led to the resignation of Chairman Edwin Nourse. His vacancy has yet to be filled.

At the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, the joint committee, too, has had its problems. Its 1948 report was late, and in 1949 the majority and minority issued two separate reports. On March 1 O'Mahoney's Democrats brought out a study supporting the Council's views on inflation, while Senator Taft's Republicans, waiting until the bogey of inflation had turned to recession, issued an I-told-you-so dissent on April 28.

The committee split extends right down through the technical staff. Chief economist for the Democrats is Theodore Kreps, a veteran of the TNEC investigations, and a crusader more typical of the New Deal, perhaps, than the Fair Deal. Economist for the Republicans is Fred E. Berquist, as close in spirit to Senator Taft as Kreps is to Senator O'Mahoney.

In their anxiety to grind axes, both sides have turned the committee into a public sounding board, and Senator O'Mahoney in particular seems to feel that its function is that of an investigative body in the New Deal tradition.

It seems clear that the joint committee has ranged far from the purpose for which it was mainly designed. In part this is the fault of the committee. But to be perfectly fair, it must be admitted that the President's reports have gone just as far afield. What he has presented to Congress is something closer to a political grab bag than to a national policy for maintaining "maximum employment, production and purchasing power."

His 1950 report is a case in point. It speaks in general terms of economic growth, equitable distribution of income, and Government help in stabilizing the economy. But its specific recommendations embrace everything from special interest legislation to programs which have been dusted off by every President since Wilson. Among them are tax policies, the Brannan Plan, the St. Lawrence Seaway, aid to medical education, rent controls and a charter for the International Trade Organization.

To see at once how far this miscellany has come from the spirit of the Employment Act, let us ask ourselves this question: If tomorrow we should be faced with a rapidly deteriorating economic situation, what is there in this document which would provide us with a program for coping with it? Would rent controls put people back to work? Is medical education a tool against depression?

The reports of the Council, the President and the joint committee should provide us with a consistent and cohesive, economic program. Let us see, in one piece and in one place, exactly what the Government is trying to achieve. Only in this way can there be intelligent debate on principles. Without a yardstick there is no way to take the measure of specific laws.

If the machinery of the Employment Act degenerates much further, the next real business downturn will find the CEA speaking into a void, the President with nothing relevant to propose, and the joint committee away on a fishing expedition.

Newest 'Industry' At British Fair Is Baby Polar Bear

London, May 9 (UP).—Britain's newest industry, a baby polar bear named Brumas, took up much of the floor space at the 1950 British Industries Fair which opened yesterday in London and Birmingham.

Brumas' birth in the London Zoo a few months ago so intrigued Britons that the zoo take is more than $33,600 above that of the same period last year.

The zoo had to enlarge the space for spectators and Brumas exhibits.

There were Brumas books, Brumas replicas in fur, wool, plastic, tableaux of Brumas and mother, Ivy; books devoted to Brumas, dancing cardboard cutouts of Brumas and photographic displays of Brumas.

The State Department loyalty files on 81 persons accused by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) will probably be made available to Senate investigators at the White House, it was learned last night.

The first of the files will be ready for examination some time today, it is hoped. Delay in getting all of them, it is believed, comes from the fact that most were in the hands of the President's Loyalty Review Board, in accordance with an order of Mr. Truman for that body to give them a post-audit.

It was also indicated yesterday that one or more officers of the State Department and the FBI will be available to aid in the examination, which will be made by the special Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee.

McCarthy has charged that the State Department has "raped" one of the files and is engaged in "spring housecleaning" on the rest, to remove derogatory material.

The subcommittee, however, can call on FBI personnel during the White House examination to determine whether all the data from that agency are still included in the files.

Meantime, Democratic drumfire against McCarthy continued yesterday with the accusation that he was a "hit and run" propagandist "of the Soviet type."

The accuser was Senator Benton (D., Conn.). In a speech urging approval of a part of the controversial FEPC, Benton departed from his text and cut loost.

"McCarthy doesn't argue, he doesn't answer, he doesn't reason. He hits and runs," Benton said.

"Senator McCarthy knows he can count on a vague distrust of the State Department and, like the Communist propagandist, he is doing his best to exploit it by any and every means."

In another development yesterday, wealthy Frederick Vanderbilt Field asked Senate loyalty investigators for another chance to answer questions in the McCarthy inquiry and thus save himself from a possible citation for contempt of Congress.

Field's unusual request for a rehearing to avoid contempt charges was made in a letter to the Senate Subcommittee.

The New Yorker, a reputed millionaire, has been described by McCarthy as an avowed Communist and an important link in McCarthy's chain of evidence against his No. 1 case, Owen Lattimore.

Field denied he was in contempt when he refused to answer a number of questions in testimony before the Tydings inquiry group April 28.

Through his attorney, Harold I. Cammer of New York, Field asked for a chance to reconsider the queries which he had turned aside with the reply that he was standing on his constitutional rights.

Cammer said a contempt action against Field would be "inconsistent with observance of the privilege against self-incrimination guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution."

Committee Counsel Edward P. Morgan recommended citations against both Field and Earl Browder, former United States Communist Party chief, after they testified in the current probe.

Party Zeal Threatens Prestige, Says Jackson

Supreme Court Justice Jackson, in his opinion Monday on the Taft-Hartley non-Communist oath, discussed at length the role of political parties in the United States. At one point he said:

"All parties, when in opposition, strive to discredit and embarass the Government of the day by spreading exaggerations and untruths and by inciting prejudiced or unreasoning disconten, not ven hesitating to injure the Nation's prestige among the family of nations.

Oppenheimer Denies Charge

call to me anyone I have ever known.

"I think I should add further comment. I have made no secret of the fact that I once knew many people in left-wing circles and belonged to several left-wing organizations. The Government has known in detail of these matters since I first started work on the atomic bomb project. These matters also came up in a story about me in Time magazine some 18 months ago, in which an interview with me was reported in part as follows:

"'Until 1936, Oppenheimer had never even voted; he was certainly one of the most unpolitical people in the world. But in the depression he watched young, finely trained physicists cracking up because they were unemployed; he also heard about relatives forced to leave Nazi Germany. Says Oppenheimer:

"I woke up to a recognition that politics was a part of life. I became a real left-winger, joined the Teachers Union, had lots of Communist friends. It was what most people do in college or late high school . . . Most of what I believed then now seems complete nonsense.'"

U. S. Again Asks Russia About Japanese POWs

Tokyo (Wednesday), May 10 (U.P.).—The United States demanded anew today that Russia say what happened to 300,000 missing Japanese war prisoners.

William Sebald, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's political adviser, read a 5000-word accusation at a meeting of the Allied Council for Japan.

Dr. Oppenheimer Listed as at Red Session of Joseph Weinberg as another of the group of some 25 or 30 persons at the gathering.

Weinberg, now an assistant professor of physics at the University of Minnesota, was named by the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1949 as the "Scientist X" whom it accused in a formal report of having given important information to a Communist Party official in 1943.

Mrs. Crouch said she had seen Dr. Oppenheimer several times after the Berkeley meeting, but never again at a closed Communist session.

The testimony caused an immediate stir in scientific circles, where Dr. Oppenheimer's standing is high. His name never before has been publicly connected with possible Communist Party membership, although his brother, Dr. Frank Oppenheimer, has admitted having been a party member.

Dr. Frank Oppenheimer was employed at the University of California radiation laboratory during the war and later went to the University of Minnesota. He testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee in June, 1949, that he and his wife both had joined the Communist Party "seeking an answer to the problems of unemployment" in the '30s. He left it before he began working on the atomic bomb project, he said.

Paul Crouch and his wife both were subpoenaed as Government witnesses at the recent Harry Bridges perjury trial, in which Communist Party membership of the longshore labor leader was the principal issue. Mrs. Crouch did not testify, however.

Crouch said he was employed by a Miami, Fla., newspaper.

Mrs. Crouch fixed the date of the meeting in July, 1941, shortly after Germany attacked the Soviet Union. She said her husband, a Communist for 17 years and a party official in Alameda County at the time, was called upon to explain the radical change in the party line to a "section meeting." The new line was one urging full support of the war effort. Previously, the Communists had called the conflict in Europe an "imperialist war."

Richard E. Combs, attorney and investigator for the State Senate Committee on Un-American Activities, which began a four-day hearing yesterday, told newsmen he had information that the meeting actually was held in the Oppenheimer home.

one mile
behind the wheel and you'll want to own it!

*Anatomic Design... (Ana-TOM-ic)... Is the newest, most advanced step in motor car making. It is the principle of engineering the anatomy of the car, every feature of the body and chassis, to suit the needs of human anatomy in a way never before achieved. It results in a car that is easier to control, more comfortable, safer for you and your family to ride in.

And here it is...the first car in America built from roadline to roofline on the principle of Anatomic Design! A car that's at least two years ahead with everything you've ever wanted most in motoring!

Like riding "outdoors"! Largest windshield in any car! Corner posts, slimmest in any car, slanted back out of your vision...no "blind spots"! Back window larger than most windshields!

Most room ever! Low as cars come; yet there's full road clearance! High-Bridge Doors offer more entrance room than in many taller cars! Single-Roll Body provides extra wide seats! Amazing head room and leg room, too! And luggage space galore, because spare tire is under the luggage compartment instead of in it!

Easiest ride on the road! A Level-Flight Ride...because exclusive spring suspension and high-line fenders allow space for springs to take up shock! Front seat adjusts to your size for effortless driving...hand brake is handy at the right!

Here's super-safety! Road-hugging lower center of gravity lets the '51 Kaiser take curves faster, safer! Truline Centerpoint Steering, self-recovering on sharpest curves, enhances control! Oversized jumbo brakes make stopping surer, swifter!

Value that holds up! Years-ahead newness and economy of operation save you money and assure lasting protection for your investment.

New 115 h.p. Kaiser Supersonic High-Torque Engine gives you faster acceleration; less vibration with higher compression, quieter, smoother performance at lowest or highest speeds; more driving power per horsepower, lower gas and oil consumption. Instant obedience and sureness of control help make the '51 Kaiser a safer, sweeter-handling car.

This Canterbury Tale Won't Do

By Richard L. Coe

BRITAIN'S MOVIE TEAM of Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, both writers, directors and producers, often have been responsible for pictures that go out of their way to be different.

In the Dupont's new arrival, "A Canterbury Tale," the boys miss the bus. Though they had a good idea for a picture, it comes off as dull, studied and, alas, a bit pretentious.

Which is too bad, for anyone who has wandered down the Pilgrim's Way toward the seat of the Primate of All England, the scene of the murder of Thomas a Becket and the setting for Chaucer's enthralling tales, must have considered that here is material for a picture. No doubt, the makers of "Colonel Blimp," "Black Narcissus," "Stairway to Heaven" and "The Red Shoes" shared that notion.

The story they come up with is curiously muggy. It's about a too artfully typical American GI who meets up with a British soldier and a girl land worker. They meet in a tiny village near Canterbury, where the girl is pursued by "The Glue Man," an anonymous village character who delights in pouring glue on the tresses of young females.

Just as the flurry we had here in Washington not long ago about whoever it was who was snipping feminine hair on the streetcars, the outcome of the search for this character drifts away into general fuzziness. His point seems to have been, the character confesses, to point to the glories of the past, but I'm hanged if I see how his actions helped that.

"A CANTERBURY TALE." Eagle-Lion release produced for J. Arthur Rank by the Archers. Written and directed by Emeric Pressburger and Michael Powell. At the Dupont.

THE CAST

Yank Sergeant	John Sweet
The Land Girl	Sheila Sim
The Yank Girl	Kim Hunter
The British Soldier	Dennis Price
The Historian	Eric Portman

Once in Canterbury, the Yank does get the letters from his girl that he's been missing, and the British soldier, a movie organist in civilian life, does get his chance to play the Bach D-minor on the cathedral organ for his continent-bound outfit. And the land girl learns that her pilot-lover is alive after all.

Naturally, the Kentish settings are the real thing and, in their way, totally wonderful. The sequences inside the cathedral are splendid, but the tone of the script is totally awry from the feel the producers try to convey.

"A Canterbury Tale" was made just after the end of the war and though an American schoolteacher turned actor, John Sweet, acts the Yank, he's too irritatingly "typical" in the way literary people have of imagining the common man.

What a shame The Archers, as Pressburger and Powell call themselves, couldn't have drawn more of their inspiration from Chaucer. As it is, this Canterbury Tale won't do.

Baptists Hear Year's Report On Missions

Chicago, May 9 (AP). — The Southern Baptist Convention opened its ninety-third session in Chicago Coliseum late today—a precedent-shattering meeting with a record 10,000 messengers attending.

The current four-day convention is the first to be held north of the Mason-Dixon Line. Also, more than 6000 Southern Baptist women came north to hold concurrent sessions of the Woman's Missionary Union, the convention auxiliary, at Medinah Temple.

Dr. M. Theron Rankin, Richmon, Va., secretary of the Southern Baptist Foreifn Mission Board, told the messengers of the 1948 work of overseas missions.

Dr. Rankin said in 1949 the board had more than 700 missionaries serving in 24 different countries. Of the 67 new missionaries appointed during the year, 19 were appointed to Africa, the Near East and Europe; 16 to Japan and Hawai, and 32 to Latin America.

The board hopes to appoint 100 new missionaries this year, 125 in 1951 and increasing 25 each year until 1954 when the board hopes to appoint 200.

Dr. Rankin said the board's receipts for 1949 reached $5,319,261, an increase of $465,313 over 1948.

In another report Thomas T. Holloway, Dallas, Texas, field secretary of the American Bible Society, said the American people will be asked to provide $500,000 for materials to print in Japan three million volumes in 1950 and five million in 1951 to reach "every hamlet in that land." He said the American Bible Society distributed almost nine million volumes of Scriptures at home and abroad in 1949.

Full-Time Youth Court Judge Urged

Appointment of a full-time Juvenile Court judge with a yearly salary of $10,000 is provided in one of six bills introduced yesterday at the legislative session of the Montgomery County Council.

The bill also would provide for appointment of a juvenile committee with staggered, three-year terms. It would give the Juvenile Court judge jurisdiction in custody cases.

A hearing date for this bill will be set later.

Another bill would give the council authority to grade, construct, reconstruct, pave or otherwise improve roads and streets in areas outside of the metropolitan area and assess the cost against owners of benefited property.

Another provides that the council may prescribe by ordinance terms and conditions under which roads and streets will be accepted for county maintenance.

Jurisdiction in the sale of abandoned and unclaimed stolen automobiles is transferred from the chief of police to the county manager in another bill, while the county attorney is authorized to print the laws of the 1950 session in a fifth bill. The sixth bill changes the procedure for bonding volunteer fire department treasurers to provide for action by the county manager and the county attorney instead of the judge of the circuit court.

A public hearing on a bill to provide $800,000 in bonds for off-street parking in Bethesda, the cost to be borne by commercial property owners, is scheduled for 7:30 p. m. tonight in the circuit courtroom at the Rockville Court House. A meeting of the Council in legislative session will be held at 7 p. m. in the council room. A bill to authorize a county-wide library system is among the bills expected to be introduced at this meeting, and dates for public hearings on several bills will be fixed at the meeting.

A group of 23 Richard Montgomery High School students attended the legislative session yesterday.

Montgomery Board Elects Mrs. Wilson

Mrs. Herman Wilson of Gaithersburg was elected president at the reorganization meeting of the Montgomery County Board of Education yesterday. Wylie W. Barrow of Bethesda was elected vice president.

The board accepted the low bid of B. Z. Harding of Gaithersburg, $607,201, for erection of the new Western Suburban Junior High School about one mile from the District line on Massachusetts ave. extended. The school will provide space for 700 children and will relieve pressure on Leland Junior High School.

The school board was informed that the Montgomery Junior College has been accredited by the Commission on Institutes of Higher Learning of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and that the college staff was commended highly by the agency.

Family Income Here Seen 25% Above Average

By S. Oliver Goodman

The average Washington family in 1949 had a net income of $5611 (after Federal income taxes) or 25 percent more than the national average of $4474.

This was shown yesterday in Sales Management magazine's twenty-first annual survey of buying power. The publication pointed out that its figures on per family income are arithmetical averages obtained by dividing total effective buying income by the total number of families. It added that its figures are substantially higher than the "median" per family estimates which will be obtained by the current United States census.

The publication estimated Washington's population as of January 1, 1950, at 897,400 and the D. C. metropolitan area at 1,412,300.

The survey added that Washington retail sales in 1949 reached a new high of $982,361,000, a gain of $5,571,000 over 1948. For the metropolitan area, retail sales were reported at $1,261,722,000, another all-time record.

The area increase here was reported as second highest among the Nation's 14 largest metropolitan county areas.

DaVinci Was Italian, So Briand Denied the Mona Lisa to Gimbel

By J. A. Livingston

AS I piece together the story from memory, from listening to the late Ellis A. Gimbel tell it, he was on his way to Europe in the spring of 1926, when the big idea hit him. The Mona Lisa! If he could only get it over here! Success would be assured.

Ellis Gimbel was then a vice president of Gimbel's department store, and an official of the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial, which was to open that June in celebration of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Livingston

Gimbel, the merchant, reasoned: Every American school child has seen a reproduction of da Vinci's masterpiece. If the original could be put on display, it would attract boys, girls, and parents from everywhere.

He confided his ambition to Col. Edward M. House, who had been President Woodrow Wilson's confidant, and who was visiting in Europe. House said: "Not a chance in a million, but why not talk it over with Herrick." Myron T. Herrick was then American Ambassador to France.

In Paris, Herrick echoed House: "Not a chance in a million."

"I'll take that chance," said Gimbel. Finally an appointment was arranged for Gimbel and Herrick to see Aristide Briand, Premier of France.

WHY DOES M. Gimbel want the Mona Lisa? Briand asked.

"Because," explained Gimbel, "it is the most famous picture in the world. Because it would assure record attendance at the Sesquicentennial."

What guarantee has France that the picture will not be damaged or lost? Briand was properly circumspect.

"I've taken out two million dollars insurance with Lloyd's," replied Gimbel. "I've arranged for an American destroyer to meet the ship in New York and escort the Mona Lisa into the harbor of Philadelpheia."

What ship is M. Gimbel taking, Briand asked.

"The Berengaria," said Gimbel.

A British ship! exclaimed Briand. The Mona Lisa must travel on a French ship!

"That can be arranged too," said Gimbel.

Briand promised his answer the next day at noon, if M. Gimbel would be so good as to return.

OUTSIDE Briand's chambers, Herrick congratulated Gimbel. "You've taken a million-to-one shot, and you've made it."

The next day at noon, Herrick and Gimbel returned. Briand came quickly to the point:

Prime Minister Briand was sorry. France does not want to send to the United States the work of an Italian artist, Leonardo da Vinci. But any other painting in the Louvre — by a French artist. That M. Gimbel could have.

"No," replied Gimbel, "I want the Mona Lisa."

But Briand was firm. A French painting, yes. Da Vinci, no.

So, the million-to-one shot, like most million-to-one shots, didn't come off. It had been stymied by France's post-World War I nationalism, applied even to art. Such nationalism, incidentally, Briand in later years renounced. But those were the days when American protectionism was leading into the Hawley-Smoot high tariff in 1930.

TODAY America is turning from high tariffs, so that Great Britain, France, Italy, Holland and other countries can sell in this country to earn the dollars needed to be self-supporting economically—without benefit of ECA. And again Gimbel's is a party to it. It's almost like turning the other cheek. But Holland is the beneficiary, not France.

On display at Gimbel's Philadelphia store are all kinds of products from the Netherlands—toys, silverware, glassware, chocolate candies, leather goods, cheeses, pottery, modern art. The display is called the Holland Fair. It's the result of a suggestion by Arthur C. Kaufmann, executive head of Gimbel's, Philadelphia. He was asked by the Netherlands Ministry of Economic Affairs to suggest what kind of Dutch goods Americans would go for. Kaufmann, after a tour of Holland, said: "Let's show the wares, and see what sells."

And so, through June 3, 30,000 square feet of Gimbel's Philadelphia floor space is lend-leased to the Netherlands Trade Commission. Merchandising men from all over the country, as well as individual consumers, can see what the Dutch have to offer. Later the fair may go to other cities.

The fair is in keeping with American ideas of merchandising. The true merchant cares not where goods come from. His concern is with good goods, with whether the merchandise draws customers. That's why Ellis Gimbel wanted the Mona Lisa for the Sesquicentennial—he knew it was a sure sale—and why Arthur Kaufmann said to the Dutch Minister of Economic Affairs, "Let's see what sells."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—Nervousness in soybeans unsettled other futures toward the close at the Board of Trade today and at the finish wheat, oats and soybeans were at the day's low.

There were no important developments in soybeans, but they reacted sharply to offerings. Traders expect a moderate quantity to be tendered on May contracts tomorrow. Today's deliveries totaled 110,000 bushels.

Weather influenced wheat, but during most of the trading feed grains carried a steady tone.

At the finish wheat was ⅜ to 1 cent lower, corn was ⅝ lower to ½ higher. Oats were ½ to 1¼ lower. Rye was unchanged to ⅜ lower. Soybeans were 2¾ to 3¾ lower and lard was 3 cents a hundredweight lower to 5 cents higher.

Chrysler Gets Out 4000 Cars In First Day

Detroit, May 9 (AP). — Chrysler Corp. reported today it turned out 4000 automobiles and trucks yesterday—its first day of operations since CIO United Auto Workers walked out January 25 on a 100-day strike.

Chrysler's normal pre-strike production was 7100 cars and trucks daily.

Absenteeism today was slightly above normal, but a spokesman viewed as "excellent" yesterday's production "of more than 50 percent of our normal output."

The company hopes to be back to peak production of Chrysler, Plymouth, De Soto and Dodge cars and Dodge trucks within 10 days.

A disagreement over financing of $100 monthly pensions (including Federal social security benefits) caused the strike of Chrysler's 89,000 production workers. It was settled last Thursday and workmen ordered back to benches Monday.

Lewis Quiz Blocked, Rep. Velde Charges

Ballot Is 9-0

Senate Unit Votes to Ban Postal Cuts

Representative Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.) and Lloyd Sidener, an Illinois miner, accused the Administration yesterday of trying to block a House investigation of John L. Lewis' tactics in the recent soft coal strike.

They made the charge after Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) of the House Labor Committee, tried, and temporarily failed, to keep a subcommittee from asking Lewis whether he used a secret code to get his miners to disobey a Federal court back-to-work order.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.), planned to subpena Lewis for questioning. But Lesinski denounced the action as highhanded and ordered the Jacobs' subcommittee dissolved. Lesinski said that only he, the full committee chairman, has power to issue subpenas.

Jacobs appealed to the full committee. By a 7-to-5 vote, it stayed Lesinski's order pending consideration of Jacobs' appeal on Thursday.

The Senate Postoffice Committee voted 9 to 0 yesterday to direct Postmaster General Donaldson to cancel the cuts in mail service he ordered in a recent economy move.

Before twice-a-day home mail delivery could be reinstated and other postal service reductions set aside, both the Senate and House would have to agree to the legislation approved by the committee.

Donaldson ordered the cutbacks in service April 18 to prevent another big deficit in postal operations.

Postoffice expenses in the present fiscal year are expected to run above $2,240,000,000. Donaldson asked a $2,235,607,000 appropriation for the next fiscal year, which starts July 1. Congress has not acted finally on the request, but the House Appropriations Committee has recommended that the fund be held to $2,207,500,000.

In an effort to increase the department's income, Donaldson recommended postal rate increase of about 600 million dollars a year. The House voted for a 100-million-dollar increase. The Senate has not acted.

Congress, of course, would have to provide additional funds if full service were restored, unless other economies could be effected which would not hit the department's regular operations.

Postal workers have protested the cuts vigorously.

Alexandria Adopts Tax On Cigarettes

Alexandria City Council last night overrode the opposition of merchant organizations in imposing a 2-cents-a-pack cigarette tax, effective June 1.

The levy is provided for in an ordinance adopted by a 5-2 vote despite protests of the Chamber of Commerce, the Retail Merchants Association and individual businessmen. It is expected to net $50,000 to help unsnarl the city's budget, already more than $200,000 in the red.

The council also approved on its first reading an amendment to a city parking meter ordinance that would eliminate the use of pennies. After conversion, all meters will require nickles and no longer will offer the 12-minute "bargain stay" for a penny.

The council also authorized the Alexandria Housing Authority to apply to the Federal Housing Administration for a grant of $160,000 to finance a study on slum-clearance procedure.

18,000 Ready to Go Out in Railroad Strike

tions the minute the strike goes into effect.

If the 2000 Southern locomotive firemen walk out, Southern's headquarters here announced, the majority of the system's 38,000 employes—including 1000 in the Washington-Alexandria area—will be laid off for the duration of the strike.

At 10 a. m. yesterday, Southern ordered an embargo placed on all passenger and freight traffic which could not reach its destination by the strike deadline.

Locally, the strike would eliminate the 22 Southern System's trains in and out of Washington. Southern's main lines run from here to New Orleans and from Cincinnati to Jacksonville, Fla. Some of the trains make stops at Alexandria and Manassas, Va.

Several hundred Washington area personnel will be furloughed by the Pennsylvania Railroad when the strike becomes effective as scheduled, west of Harrisburg.

Passenger and freight service on PRR between here and such western cities as Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis would be canceled. The Liberty Limited, running from Washington to Chicago direct, would be cut out, as would other crack trains to Chicago running from New York and connecting at Harrisburg for Washington's Chicago-bound passengers.

United Press reported from Philadelphia headquarters of Pennsy that the strike west of Harrisburg would affect one-half of the line's freight business and one-third of its passenger service.

Pennsy ordered a freight embargo as of 12:01 a. m. today, and stated it would shut down all strike-hit operations. There was no estimate made of how many PRR's 116,000 employes would be furloughed as a result of the strike.

Railroad officials said some of Southern's and Pennsy's normal traffic could be handled through the five other lines operating through Washington: Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Atlantic Coastline, Seaboard Airline, and Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac.

The New York Central said it would cancel 425 daily passenger and freight trains, should the strike come off, but would use "available qualified personnel" to provide service for essential passengers, mail and freight.

Santa Fe cancelled four crack trains running between Chicago and Los Angeles

The locomotive firemen's union decided to strike only four lines, instead of all, for "strategic' reasons, presumably to avoid Government action of some sort through tends to spread the strike in time, the President or Congress. The in a sort of creeping paralysis, union has said, however, that it in- through all of its 110,000 members.

Just Imagine It's Yours!

You say you have never driven a Cadillac?

Well, it's a lovely day—and there are beautiful roads to travel down and interesting places to visit—and a little dreaming never hurt a soul . . .

. . . so just slide over behind the wheel. It's yours!

First, you'll just want to sit for awhile—here where royalty has sat, and the great of industry and state, and of all the learned professions. Yes, the driver's seat in a Cadillac is meeting place for the world's distinguished people.

And sitting here—with your hand on the slender, obedient wheel—you get a close-up view of the ingrained goodness that makes this car so unmistakably . . . the Standard of the World.

The gorgeous upholstery fabrics are tailored in the richest fashion. The exquisite hardware is wrought with a jeweller's care. The lovely instrument panel is a feast for the eyes. All about you is proof of quality.

And then you turn the key, touch the soft-throated engine into action—and you're away, away, away!

The steering wheel all but reads your mind! The brakes are as soft as velvet, and immediate in their response! The road has become a boulevard—and the turns and lights seem so very close together!

And the soft, easy quietness of it all! You just sit and relax—in complete contentment—and the miles go by—and the miles go by . . .

. . . "Oh, how I wish this car were mine!"

Well, it's time, we think, to stop dreaming—and lend an ear to this . . .

. . . the lower-priced cars in the Cadillac line cost less to buy than the highest-priced models of numerous other cars!

. . . Cadillac economy is so outstanding that a single filling of gasoline will usually suffice for a full day's drive!

. . . and a Cadillac car is built so well that its lifespan has never been fully measured!

We think you'll agree that, with facts like these, it's time to stop your dreaming.

It's time to go into action—and to make this car your own!

With Shirley Povich

WHEN THE 8-to-5 favorite, Your Host, finished a tuckered ninth in the 14-horse field, the man who was left holding the biggest uncashed ticket on the Kentucky Derby was Mr. Leslie Combs, master of the Spendthrift Farms at Lexington.

The thousands of other unfortunates who charged the mutuel windows to get down on Your Host could philosophize by simply calling it a bad day, taking their losses, and putting the colt, the race and the Derby out of their minds. Not so Mr. Combs.

POVICH

Such short-lived dismay cannot be the happy lot of Mr. Combs, who is the owner of Your Host's sire, the imported Alibhai. Your Host will lose that Derby all over again for Combs, every time his stallion Alibhai is bred to a mare, and there is a long list awaiting his services.

If Combs didn't bet a dime on the race, he was still the biggest loser. You see, his agents had plans for Alibhai in the event Your Host won and crowned his sire with the eminence of having fathered a Derby winner. The stud fee, they told Combs, was going up from $500 to $10,000 the moment Your Host won the race.

MY MAN, Mr. Humphrey Finney, who edits the Maryland Horse, sort of liked Your Host's chances to win the Derby, but he said so with reservations that, in the light of subsequent events, were quite wonderful. He liked Middleground, too, he said, for one important reason: Trainer Maxie Hirsch.

"I will never discount Hirsch in a Derby or any other important race," said Mr. Finney last week. "He is a positive genius for bringing a horse up to a special race and nobody's horse will be more fit or come out of smarter hands than Hirsch's Middleground."

The astuteness of that observation was suddenly remembered at 5:35 p. m. at Churchill Downs on Saturday when up the middle of the track came Middleground to take it all. And in only 2/5 of a second off Whirlaway's record time for the race. Never was a horse more fit.

When Middleground finished second, two lengths back of Black George in the mile Derby trial a few weeks before the Derby, it was actually Hirsch's fault. Hirsch had bigger plans for Middleground. He was aiming only at the Derby, wouldn't have Middleground shod with mudcalks for the slop of the pre-Derby trial. You see, he was waiting for his own stable blacksmith to arrive from Texas, didn't want any strange smithy fooling around with Middleground's feet.

HIRSCH, who broke Middleground to saddle only a couple of years ago, actually handled his rider even more patiently than he did his horse. He had Jockey Willie Boland under his wing. for five years before springing him as a Derby jockey last Saturday.

He found young Boland riding quarter-horses in Texas, and gave him a job as an exercise boy with the King Ranch string. He must have liked something about the kid's style, because Hirsch announced three years ago, "If this boy can ride in the afternoon like he does in the morning, he'll be one of the great ones."

There wasn't too much dismay for Middleground's backers when Hirsch determined to give Boland the Derby mount despite the fact that only one apprentice jockey ever rode any of the previous 75 Derby winners. It was easy to rationalize that if Boland was good enough for Hirsch he was good enough to bet on.

It was Jimmy Cannon who later observed that "for a kid who was seeing his first Derby, Boland had the best seat at the Downs—on Middleground's back."

WITH THE Preakness upcoming in 10 days, and then the Belmont a couple of weeks later, there's no readiness, however, to concede Middleground any triple crown. He's the solid factor, of course, showed that he could stay close to the speed in the early running, and still finish full of charge over a route.

But the Preakness, a sixteenth shorter, could be more in favor of both Your Host and Mr. Trouble, with Hill Prince apt to go to the post the betting favorite. Hill Prince had most of the bad luck in the Derby, plus one of Arcaro's worst rides. He might have been the best horse in that race, but you'd have to be sort of shameless to detract from Middleground's victory.

The Belmont, at a mile and a half, will be the better test. That will be no day for the faint-hearted like Your Host. It's a race for the stayers, and that means Middleground and Hill Prince. That one's stacking up as the Race of the Year.

Against Middleweight Villemain

Philly Fed Up With LaMotta, Gives Robinson Title Chance

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP).—The Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission announced today it will recognize the winner of the June 5 Ray Robinson-Robert Villemain fight as the middleweight champion of the world.

The commission then called upon the National Boxing Association—of which it is a member—to vacate Champion Jake LaMotta's rights to the title. Commissioner John (Ox) Da Grossa said LaMotta has not defended his title against the leading challenger within the NBA's stipulated six-month period.

If the NBA refuses to endorse the Pennsylvania commission's action and declines to vacate LaMotta's title, then Da Grosa said, the Pennsylvania body will take the matter under further discussion before deciding on its next move.

At Paterson, N. J., Abe J. Greene, commissioner of the NBA, said, "We will canvas members of the executive committee of the NBA to determine what our policy will be. Pennsylvania has two outstanding men in Robinson and Villemain. We should know more about the situation in a week."

LaMotta at his New York home said he is willing to fight anybody named by the International Boxing Club.

"Championships are won and lost in the ring," said Jake. "I'm no matchmaker. It's up to the IBC. I'm under contract to them. I'll fight Robinson or Villemain or any of them. I fought Robinson five times and it might as well be five more."

Da Grosa, speaking at the formal signing of the Robinson-Villemain fight, said he had discussed the situation with Greene and that the NBA head had told him Pennsylvania was on the right road.

ond run, the Nats' lead was pared to 3-2.

Hittle found a friend in Merrill Combs, the Nats' new shortstop, a bit later. Philley drove a hot smash toward left, and Combs came up with a brilliant stop to hold it to an infield single that merely filled the bases. The play deprived the White Sox of the tying run at that point.

Hittle Tightens Up

Harris' only move toward Hittle was to send Coach George Myatt to the mound to talk to him, and the small crowd applauded when he was left in the game. He quickly got two strikes on Appling, and then struck him out with a let-up curve.

In the ninth, Masi opened up with a single to left and moved to second with the tying run on Carrasquel's infield out. But Hittle wasn't letting go. He got rid of Pinch Hittler Joe Erraut on a fly to Noren and lured Busby into hitting a ground ball to Yost and claimed the White Sox for his very own, again.

IN SHORT . . . Bucky Harris was taking Sam Dente's word that he could play second base when he switched him from shortstop. He'd never seen him at the position before . . . After Luke Appling, of all people, stole second in the first inning, his infield pals had to remind Dente that he was playing second base and should have covered the bag . . . Sam Mele swung late on a Howie Judson pitch in the third, 24 hours late. It would have been a homer if hit the night before, when the temporary left field seats were still standing . . . Senator Jim Cain (R., Wash.), pitched to the Nats in batting practice. It was a warmup for the upcoming congressional game . . . Bucky Harris tempted his critics by benching his two hot outfielders, Gil Coan and Eddie Stewart, against Chicago's left-handed pitching.

General Manager Frank Lane of the White Sox huddled with Clark Griffith before the game, in a super-secret trade talk that was probably futile . . . Tonight, for the second straight time, left handers will start for both teams—Bob Kuzava and Steve Nagy.

Yanks Beat Browns; Indians Lose to A's

Lopat Spins 3-Hitter, Ostrowski Bows, 4-2

New York, May 9 (AP).—Lefty Ed Lopat handcuffed St. Louis with three hits tonight as the New York Yankees took advantage of four Brownie errors to defeat the cellar-dwelling visitors, 4-2. Lopat fanned seven in registering his third victory.

Hank Bauer had a hand in all the Yankee runs. He hit a single and double, drove in two runs and scored two himself.

The Yankees collected nine hits and all their runs off Lefty Joe Ostrowski, who went down to his first defeat of the season.

Dropo Leads Attack on Trucks With 2d Homer

Boston, May 9 (AP).—Mel Parell pitched the Boston Red Sox into a first-place tie with Detroit today by whipping the Tigers, 6-1, with the help of homers by Bobby Doerr and Walt Dropo.

Virgil Trucks was the losing pitcher.

The two clubs are deadlocked with exact .667 percentages but on a games won and lost basis, the Bostonians have a one-game edge.

Dropo, rugged rookie playing his eighth game since his emergency recall from Louisville, led the Boston attack.

The big first sacker, filling in for the injured Billy Goodman, blasted his second homer and collected two singles to drive in two runs.

He was the only player with three hits as each of the Sox collected at least one safety off three Detroit pitchers.

Doerr's homer was his third. It was Boston's first run of the game and the hit off Trucks first, who suffered his first loss. Trucks, who has won two, now has failed to finish four games.

Dear Folks: At Pimlico

Among the scribes here who were at the Derby the consensus is that Your Host was brought to the Derby in rather odd fashion. The colt showed last winter that he thrived on action, but he failed to go a distance in competition after he left the West Coast. His only race was at seven furlongs, although he did workout after the running. In the Derby, he was a champion for seven furlongs and a bit farther, but around the mile mark he tossed in the sponge. In contrast, Middleground had been in the Derby Trial and other long events, on all kind of tracks and under a variety of styles of handling. While Your Host was getting the publicity, Middleground was getting the real prep. See you on the rail.—BILL.

PRACTICE SPIN—Mary Gray of the Washington Jets takes a practice spin in a workout in preparation for tonight's Roller Derby opener at Uline Derby between the Jets and the New Jersey Jolters in an 11-day series

At Uline

Roller Derby Series Opens Here Tonight

The Washington Jets play host to the New Jersey Jolters tonight in the opening of a Roller Derby series running through May 19 at Uline Arena.

The Jets checked in from Cleveland yesterday and the Jerseyites arrived from New York and have begun workouts at Riverside Stadium.

● The Jets and the Jolters broke even in their series last fall, but the local outfit is rated very much an underdog in the current series.

The Jets have been eliminated from the championship playoffs and are reclining comfortably in last place. New Jersey, on the other hand, is fighting with the New York Chiefs and the Philadelphia Panthers for the championship.

Silver Rich, former captain of the Panthers, has replaced Bill Reynolds as player-coach of the Jets. Four of the Roller Derby League's leading ten scorers will see action.

The Jets' Bob Lewis and Mary Gardner and the Jolters' Sid Harnesk and Monta Jean Jayne are the high scoring quartet.

Army-Navy Stays in Lead

—They Average 2 Pounds—

Anglers Shoot for Bass, But Get Only Blues at Nags Head

By Ralph Murdock

HERE'S HOW your scribe and his accomplice, Herb Goodman, made out in our attack on the channel bass at Oregon Inlet. We really think we deserve an "E" for effort for we tried hard but failed. In fact about 40 boat loads of anglers went down swinging on Sunday. Only about 20 bronze hefties were taken. Ken Ward, the skipper of the "Cherokee" was high gun when he captured six big bruisers which weighed around 40 pounds each.

Murdock

Most of the anglers redeemed themselves in the afternoon by fishing for blues. We caught 13 in 2½ hours. The big catch was 53. The blues averaged better than 2 pounds each. On Monday a strong northeaster came up and no one ventured out. It was just too rough for ocean fishing. Capt. Dewey Tillett was our guide.

While the salt-water fishermen were suffering, the fresh-water anglers were doing all right for themselves. Mr. A. H. Wells and W. T. Uray, both of Wilson, N. C., caught their limit of large-mouth bass on three straight days. (The limit on large-mouth bass in N. C. is eight the year round.) The trio of Tar Heels fished two days at Duck and one day at Collington. Incidentally, Nags Head is one of the few spots where you can enjoy both salt and fresh-water fishing. You just write your own ticket.

LARGEST BLACK BASS taken from the fresh-water ponds at Collington during the week were enticed by two physicians from Roanoke, Va. The biggest was a 4½-pound large-mouth taken by Dr. J. O. Hart until his cohort, Dr. F. E. Hamlin, on the following day pulled in a whopper that weighed 4 pounds 9½ ounces. Identical baits were used by the medicos—silver minnow lures with pork rind attached.

Virginia Beach, Va., May 9 (AP).—Dorothy Kirby, a veteran of 19 years of golf, turned on the pressure when the chips were down here today to edge Mrs. H. N. Allen of Newport News, Va., 3 and 1, in the first round of the Women's Southern Golf Association's thirty-fifth Amateur Championship Tournament.

Just when it appeared that Mrs. Allen was going to upset the 30-year-old Atlanta star, Miss Kirby came up with two terrific drives on the 400-yard fifteenth hole to score a birdie 4 and go 1 up.

The day's closest match out there on the par 72 Cavalier Yacht and Country Club layout saw Mrs. Robert Davis of Virginia Beach squeeze by Peggy Nehls of Marshall, Tex., 1 up, on the nineteenth hole. Frances Rich of Bainbridge, Ga., edged Mrs. Llewellyn Miller of Charlottesville, Va., 2-and-1.

Other than these matches, the favorites won handily. Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., the tournament favorite, trounced Mrs. Marion McFarland, of Orlando, Fla., 6-and-5. Mrs. Margaret Gunther Lee of Memphis, Tenn., the defending champion, thrashed Mary Pat Janssen of Charlottesville, Va., 7-and-6.

Mary Lena Faulk, who set a Southern Women's qualfying record of 69 yesterday, routed Mrs. Robert Givens of Atlanta, 7 and 5.

Compromise Bill Offered

to interfere with progress of the home-rule discharge petition.

He now feels the discharge petition will not succeed, and so has filed the new bill as a compromise, Harris said.

In apparent coincidence, the discharge petition took an unexpected spurt yesterday with the addition of four new signers. They raised the total to 179, within 40 names of the 218 House majority that would bring to the floor the Senate-approved home rule bill.

Harris is chairman of the District subcommittee which last year held hearings on the Senate-approved bill before the measure was tabled by the District Committee.

Chief feature of the Senate bill emitted by th Harris measure is the proposed representative home rule city council. The Senate bill does not contain provision for the nonvoting District delegate, but that idea was included in a home rule bill that the District Committee placed before the House in the last Congress.

Both bills include the elected school board plan.

Voting Representation

Harris also filed a joint resolution in the House proposing an amendment to the Constitution that would let Congress give the District voting representation in Congress and a vote in presidential elections.

This resolution goes to the Judiciary Committee. Similar ones have been filed in the House by Representatives Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) and Adam C. Powell (D., N. Y.) and in the Senate by District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.).

Among yesterday's new signers of the home rule discharge petition were Representatives Karl Stefan (R., Neb.) and Ivor D. Fenton (R., Pa.).

Representative Stefan said he signed the petition because he feels so many persons are interested in the measure it should be considered by the House. He said he thinks the measure should be brought to the House floor—"I think we ought to look it over," said Stefan.

Representative Fenton said he signed because "I think the people of the District are entitled to get at least a start on local home rule."

Harris said his bill provides a measure of home rule by giving the people a voice in their local affairs by having their delegate in Congress and an elected school board.

Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.) first sponsor of the discharge petition said he things the delegate and other features of the Harris bill are good in themselves. "But I don't thinks the delegate and other toward granting home rule as does the Senate bill," he said.

Asks Continued Effort

Kennedy called for continued effort to complete the discharge petition. He said he feels good progress is being made and that he still is hopeful it will get the necessary 218 signers. The last signer yesterday was No. 186, but seven signatures are either duplication or withdrawals, reducing the total to 179, members said.

The Harris bill will go to the House District Judiciary Subcommittee, of which Harris is chairman.

Dolly Keleher Is Evicted

until her husband, John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher forked up the $60,000 settlement that he has appealed—Dolly was a Queen to the last as she left the building where she has lived 17 years.

She wouldn't leave until three doctors and two nurses waited on her, one of the doctors bringing huge X-rays which she said showed a spot on the apex of her left lung.

Besides the doctors, the United States marshal, the chief deputy marshal, the assistant chief deputy marshal attended her in a rare display of rank, promp and circumstance.

As she was carried from the apartment on the stretcher, from a baby grand above drifted the strains of "Who's Sorry Now?" "Home Sweet Home" and "Horses! Horses! Horses," the latter apparently an allusion to her husband, of bookie fame.

But a near-rhubarb developed at Gallinger over whether Mrs. Keleher should or should not be admitted. She arrived there at 5:20 p. m. (by her own calculations) and wasn't admitted until 9:30 p. m. The night admitting officer, Dr. William Nessell, decided after conferences and tests that she was ill and could enter the hospital for medical study.

Neither Dr. Nessel nor Mrs. Keleher knew how long she'd be studied.

"Thank you, thank you, thank you everybody," she murmured beneath the veil to one and all.

"Are my feet covered?" Dolly inquired as she was wheeled out of the elevator.

Quick hands spread over her toes the fur coat she had insisted on bringing with her.

"Is my face covered?" she inquired as she was wheeled toward the ambulance. It was, by the veil, as with a Goddess of the Nile.

Earlier less dulcet voices had been heard from inside her apartment.

"This isn't prosecution—this is persecution!" Dolly had charged.

Then in late afternoon, as doctors were examining her to see if she was physically fit for eviction, and as marshals stood in the next room there came an incredulous male voice.

"She wants to take her furs with her!"

"The hospital isn't going to take that kind of stuff!" said another voice with restrained impatience.

Dolly has held her fortress all day, for seven hard hours, against the maneuvers of regiments of marshals, doctors, movers and attorneys.

Only the day before deputy marshals, armed with an eviction order, had entered the apartment with a locksmith's aid.

Then Dolly protested she was ill with a lung condition and could not leave.

Yesterday the marshals returned with orders to carry her out on a stretcher if necessary.

It was necessary.

Deputy marshals barred reporters at the door, but from inside the invisible Dolly gave frequent press conferences from her bed in a clear, commanding voice.

While her mahogany furniture was carried out stick by stick she sent reporters on errands to call her doctor and her lawyer. For the latter she wrote a note: "Come here as soon as possible. U. S. marshals are here."

This embattled cry for reinforcements went unheeded, though later her private doctor did appear, along with two others provided by the marshals.

"I'm all alone!" the unseen Dolly spoke to reporters from her bed as her eviction for owing more than $600 in back rent continued apace. "Just as alone as I can be! I can't even afford my old colored man who's been with me eight years."

"I've lost 40 pounds! I'm down to 127 now."

A grandfather's clock passed through the door and streetward.

"I haven't got a thing. I've pawned $24,000 in jewelry in the last three years. He never gave me a penny. He forced me to gamble my own money on horses."

As if this were not bad enough of itself, Dapper Jack, said she, insisted that he make the selections. From the losses she then sustained this was the crushing blow.

"He was betting with Frank Erickson," she exclaimed, as her little library, including Joseph in Egypt, Oliver Wiswell and H. M. Pulham, Esq., passed through the door, followed shortly by a fine record collection of rhumbas and sambas.

"In debt for $80,000" she flung out.

An incredibly enormous Capehart was edged out the door on the biceps of the movers. A mahogany Chippendale 150 years old passed in state down the carpeted corridors. A beauteous but empty bird cage followed.

"They were love birds," said Dolly. "Aqua covered. I sent them over to Schmid's to get them out of this."

While the doctors examined Dolly for two hours the last pieces were carried out until the apartment stood empty as an unused tomb.

One of the last pieces to leave was Aurora, Godess of the Dawn

Reclining in a grimy pushcart, Aurora cut quite a figure in her marbled glory, but all this faded when the next figure emerged.

Dolly on a stretcher, swathed in furs and veils.

"Horses! Horses!" rang out the music, at once sad and triumphant. "Crazy Over Horses!"

Highway Span Opens, Does Its Job Bit Too Well

Northbound Traffic Moves So Fast It Backs Up on D. C. Bridge Approach

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

The six-million-dollar new Highway Bridge was opened to traffic yesterday noon, and during its first rush hour it did its job too well.

Northbound traffic moved so easily onto and across the four-lane Potomac River span that by 5 p. m. it had caused a tie-up at the District approaches.

A check at that time showed cars backed up onto the bridge from Maine ave. and from 14th st. traffic signals at C st. and Independence ave. sw. The bridge connects with Route No. 1 at the south end and with 14th st. on the District side.

District Highway and traffic officials, recalling first-month jams at Whitehurst Freeway approaches, were not alarmed, but said studies are being made.

Another jam developed at the south end of the old bridge, but highway officials said this would be corrected in about a week.

The trouble there is that the four-lane southbound bridge narrows to a two-lane bottleneck at its southern end.

The new span was opened with ribbon cutting and speeches that mentioned the probable need of new bridges soon across the Potomac.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) commended District officials on construction of the new span and said he looked forward "confidently" to the "early construction" of a bridge connecting Alexandria with southeast Washington.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, listed other major highway projects that have been completed in the last two years—Klingle Bridge over Rock Creek Park, Whitehurst Freway, South Capitol Street Bridge and Dupont Circle.

It will not be possible to replace the old Highway Bridge now, as first planned, he said, because the money isn't available.

Recreation Unit Rejects Pool Plan

'Full Cooperation' Offer to Interior For Nonsegregated Use Voted Down

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

In a tangle over terminology, the District Recreation Department yesterday tentatively rejected a resolution offering the board's "full cooperation" to the Interior Department in operating its six swimming pools on a nonsegregated basis this summer.

Last month the recreation board turned down an offer by Interior to allow the board to take over the pools on a inter-racial basis.

After voting down the statement of policy by a 3-3 tie, board members unanimously agreed to redraft the resolution and reconsider it at a later date.

Presented by Wender

The resolution was presented by Board Chairman Harry S. Wender. Its purpose, Wender said, was to "dispel conclusively" any suggestion that the recreation board is resentful of Interior's announced plan to operate the pool on a nonsegregated basis or was predicting the program's failure.

Before offering his resolution at the board meeting, Wender expressed his "earnest hope and plea" that all citizens will cooperate with Interior in making its nonsegregated program successful.

James E. Schwab, board vice chairman, opposed the Wender resolution chiefly because its pledge of "full cooperation" is in conflict, he said, with the position the board took last month in washing its hands of complete nonsegregated pool operation at this time.

Wender insisted his interpretation of "full cooperation" was purely moral and educational and did not imply operational assistance.

"Let's don't further mislead the public," Schwab replied. "To me, 'full cooperation' means more than sitting back and merely wishing them (Interior officials) well."

Fowler Joins Schwab

Walter L. Fowler, another board member, joined Schwab, stating the "public judges us by our actions, not by resolutions." It was Fowler who called for a redraft of the resolution.

Mrs. O. G. Hankins also opposed the resolution as offered.

Voting with Wender were Mrs. Alice C. Hunter and Edward J. Kelly, assistant to the superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Mrs. Hunter favored the resolution, but insisted announcement now of "full cooperation" was not consistent with the board's refusing to operate morning swimming classes as it has done in the past.

Kelly Backs Amendment

Kelly vigorously urged adoption of the Wender statement. "I think this will go a long way toward restoring public confidence in Interior's ability to operate the pools. And it certainly is entirely different from anything the board has ever done before."

Recreation Superintendent Milo Christiansen said use of the pools would be entirely a matter for the children themselves to decide. The recreation staff will neither urge nor forbid youngsters to use the pools, he said.

He said children attending the recreation department day camps would not be taken to pools while in nonsegregated operation.

The meeting yesterday was also the first since reports that Interior is seeking to block the reappointment of Schwab, whose term expires May 29.

Schwab told board members he was not actively seeking reappointment, that he was performing the duty as a public service.

Kelly announced Banneker, Takoma and East Potomac pools will open June 5, with McKinley, Francis and Anacostia pools slated to open June 12.

HELD IN MURDERS—His hands locked in handcuffs, William A. Tyler, jr., 18, leaves District Morgue after a coroner's jury held him for grand jury action in the murder of two Lansburgh & Bros. department store watchmen

Tyler Held For Jury in Slaying of 2 Watchmen

Friend Describes Prowl Night Before Lansburgh's Killings In 'Casing' Store

A coroner's jury yesterday held 18-year-old William A. Tyler, jr., for action of the grand jury in the Good Friday double murder at the Lansburgh & Bro. department store.

The jury acted after 15 minutes' deliberation on police testimony on the brutal slayings and the evidence of a previously unnamed youth who admitted "casing" the store with Tyler the night before the crime.

Howard B. Roy, 20, of 1858 Alabama ave. se., a dishwasher in a Justice Department cafeteria, took the stand in the District Morgue hearing room, pointed to the defendant and in almost a whisper recounted details of their night-before roaming through the store.

Police regard Roy's statement of his April 6 evening with Tyler as one of the chief factors leading to Tyler's full confession. Detectives had interviewed Roy, taken his story and confronted Tyler with it, shortly before the defendant confessed.

The husky Tyler sat through the 25 minutes of police witnesses' accounts without moving a muscle, with his head slightly bowed and looking into space. He was flanked by a marshal, to whom he was handcuffed, and his attorney, Maurice R. Weeks.

Tyler signed a complete confession to killing John Carpenter, 66, and Oliver R. Hess, 57, both store watchmen, after voluntarily subjecting himself to a lie-detector test last Saturday.

Curiously, it was Tyler's signature on the confession that linked him yesterday to the housebreaking last St. Patrick's Day of the Weather-Master Co., 2727 9th st. ne.

Tyler, according to police, ransacked the office but took only several blank checks. One of those he made out for $45.19 and cashed.

Checked by a police expert after a detective noted that Tyler had worked at the Weather-Master Co., the writing on the check and confession matched.

Then manager of the firm, Louis M. Tulman, said he would not press forgery charges against Tyler unless the United States attorney's office requested it.

At the District Building the Commissioners yesterday officially commended 48 Metropolitan policemen, from Superintendent Robert J. Barrett down to privates, for their combined efforts in breaking the Good Friday murder

The city heads acted on recommendation of Assistant Police Superintendent Walter T. Storm, who said the force investigated "more clews and tips than in any case on record in this department."

In addition to Major Barrett commendations were given:

Asst. Supt. Robert S. Bryant, Asst. Supt. Oscar J. Letterman, Captain Howard V. Covell, Captain Robert V. Murray, Lieutenants Richard J. Felber, Michael J. Mahoney, Albert Hitt, David McCutcheon, Joseph Shimon and Harry Blackman.

Detective Sergts. Lloyd B. Furr, Lawrence A. Hartnett, Clarence R. Winemiller, John L. Sullivan, Charles Burns, Murray Kutner, Herbert C. Young, William W. Friel, Grayston W. Chapman, Irving Lubore, Bernard D. Crooke; Precinct Detectives Theodore R. Haage and Peter M. Zazanis.

Detective Sergts. James Powell and Herman Xander; Precinct Detectives Gordon B. Colbert, Carl A. Rudbeck and Richard R. Cranford; Pvt. Francis N. Savage.

Sergts. Robert Sandberg and Joseph B. Bohannon; Corporal John H. Hayden; Bvts. John B. Singleton, John F. Norris, Fred W. McLeod, A. B. Masters, R. D. McClure, R. T. Joiner, H. T. Pilling, H. Tucker, C. T. Tate, J. S. Titus.

Precinct Detectives Maurice J. Casem and Olof J. Schelin; Probational Detectives Nicholas Genua and Arthur L. Weber; Pvt. John B. Cline, all of the First Precinct.

Montgomery Hospital Plan Is Debated

The turbulent hospital situation in Montgomery County came in for more discussion yesterday at the meeting of the County Council in Rockville.

The hospital facilities advisory committee presented a preliminary report and at the same meeting the Silver Spring Hospital Association presented a petition of more than 5500 signatures, including 62 doctors, asking for a 150-bed hospital in that section.

The advisory committee, appointed a year ago by the council to study the general situation, suggested that a 150-bed medical center be built on East-West Highway, east of Rock Creek, and that the Suburban Hospital at Bethesda be consolidated with the new hospital. It was suggested at the meeting that Suburban might become a contagious-diseases hospital. The cost of the proposed center was estimated at $1,800,000. The advisory group was headed by Dr. Mark V. Ziegler of the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Ziegler's group also urged appointment of a county board of medical care to coordinate medical facilities and services in the county, with a competent director of medical care assigned to it by the Health Department.

The advisory committee opposed a Silver Spring hospital, saying it would further deplete the insufficient patient load at Suburban Hospital, which is being operated below capacity. The committee will present a final report next month.

The Silver Spring Hospital group, led by Ralph D. Boyd, former president of the Allied Civic Group, contended that the 27-acre site on Forest Glen rd. near Georgia ave. in Silver Spring is nearer the center of population. It said the growing population demands a larger hospital and that 62 doctors have declared they will take patients there if it is built, who now take their patients to Washington.

Warrant Sworn

Clerk Sends Back Checks, But Not Cash

A warrant charging larceny after trust was sworn out yesterday against a clothing store employe who failed to make a $4000 bank deposit Monday.

Police said Joseph Girard, 50, of 1304 19th st. nw., mailed $1400 in checks and money orders back to the store, Long's Clothiers, 731 7th st. nw.

The envelope was postmarked Baltimore. The rest of the deposit —$2600—was in cash.

Girard left for the Second National Bank, two blocks from the store, at 10:15 a. m. Monday. When he failed to return, Mrs. Faye Siegel, who was in charge of the store, first called the bank, then sent an employe after Girard, and finally called in detectives.

Takoma Park Turns Down Center Bonds

Takoma Park residents yesterday decided, 273 to 205, that they didn't want to borrow up to $200,000 in bonds to construct a municipal center.

Only 478 of more than 4000 eligible voters turned out in a special referendum to defeat the issue by a 68-vote margin.

Montgomery recorded 241 against; 100 for. Prince Georges totaled 32 against; 105 for.

Under the ordinance calling for the referendum, the bonds would have been issued for 10 years at not more than 2 percent interest.

Presbytery Plans Study Of Area Needs

The Presbytery of Washington City yesterday approved a plan for more effective church extension program in Greater Washington.

Under the plan, a board of up to 15 laymen and clergymen will study the needs for additional Presbyterian work in the area.

In addition to planning for new churches, the board will study the need for merging and relocating present churches, and will seek to raise a special fund for purchasing church sites.

C. T. Clayton, a member of Fourth Presbyterian Church, presented a plan. He declared that Presbyterians today are "a little handful" of 22,000 in a city of a million and a half, where they should number several hundred thousand.

"We've got to have churches for the people or we are going to lose the people," he declared, adding that there is now a need for at least six new churches.

During the discussion, it was revealed that at least six Presbyterian churches in the city have been called recently by real estate dealers who want to buy their property.

The Rev. Dr. Ralph K. Merker, stated clerk of the presbytery, said that none of the churches plan to move or abandon their work. He said he did not know why the real estate dealers called.

In other actions, the Presbytery dispatched the Rev. Benjamin Lynt to the Potomac Presbytery so that he could become pastor of Second Presbyterian Church, Alexandria, early in June.

Also approved was a report offered by the Rev. Robert T. Bridge, associate pastor of New York Avenue church, urging that stronger churches consider ways of providing services in unchurched residential areas "with a view to detaching groups of members to form the nuclei of new churches.

Hearing Set On Abandoning Slum Project

The District Commissioners yesterday announced they will hold a public hearing May 24 on a recommendation to abandon the controversial Marshall Heights redevelopment program.

The recommendation came from the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which had voted unanimously April 27 to drop the project. Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, said the hearing will be held at 10 a. m. in the District Building Board room.

The Commissioners a year ago approved NCPPC's plan to make Marshall Heights, in southeast Washington, the scene of the city's first large-scale slum-clearance project. But landowners there objected, and Congress has refused to appropriate funds for the work.

After approving the NCPPC plan, the Commissioners put into effect a freeze order that prevented landowners at Marshall Heights from starting any new construction or doing any "substantial remodeling" to existing homes. To lift the freeze order and abandon the project, it was necessary to go through the original procedure of receiving a recommendation from NCPPC and holding a public hearing.

Lawyer Denies Client's Charge Of Swindle

Albert F. Graham, an attorney on trial on a charge of swindling a client out of $2000, denied his guilt yesterday and scoffed at a statement that he had promised to use the sum to bribe a policeman.

A District Court jury will receive the case this morning after final instruction by Judge Jennings Bailey.

Graham was indicted after Francisco Gal, a Hungarian chef, told police that he paid the lawyer in an attempt to get American citizenship.

Gal said that he feared that a forfeiture of $25 by him in what police described as a "sex type" case might cause him to be denied Americanization. He said he went to Graham and was told that $2000 would be needed to pay a vice squad officer, who on the witness stand denied ever having been offered the money.

On the stand, Graham told the jury that the $2000 represented fees for himself and his law partner, Evan T. Davis. Graham said he gave Gal receipts for all money paid to the firm, and denied any improper action.

Prosecutor Frank Patton characterized the transaction a "larceny by fraud and trickery." Defense Attorney Irvin Goldstein said that under the evidence Graham was guiltless but that the charge brought against him was in effect punishment. Goldstein said that a lawyer's stock in trade is the "good name he bears."

Vice Squad Raids Home, Holds 3 on Gaming Charges

Vice squad raiders yesterday arrested three persons in a house at 1436 W st. nw., and charged them with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

They were Mrs. Ruby Mason, 37, and Julia T. Carroll, 32, of 1436 W st. nw., and Edward Shepherd, 76, of 1424 W st. nw.

Vice squad detectives said the raiders recovered an adding machine, a quantity of numbers slips and marked money.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, who issued warrants in the raid, released all three under bond and scheduled their arraignment for May 17.

Coroner Rules Shulman Death Was Suicide

Robert (Ryebread) Shulman, 39-year-old gambler, committed suicide, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, ruled yesterday in a certificate of death.

Shulman's body was found in the Potomac near Hains Point Thursday.

Dr. MacDonald had withheld certification, he said, pending chemical tests.

Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, said that handwrtiing on notes found in a car abandoned near Hains Point has been definitely identified as Shulman's by friends and a handwriting expert.

One of the pencil-scribbled notes told of Shulman's fear of "going nutty."

In Silver Spring

Two Held In $850 Postal Theft

Two suspects in the $850 burglary of a Silver Spring (Md.) branch postoffice, May 6, arrested Monday on a tip from an alert Alexandria (Va.) bank teller, were held for a Federal grand jury in separate hearings yesterday.

The men were arrested after one of them tried to deposit six money orders in the Burke and Herbert Bank at Alexandria. The men were identified by postal inspectors as Irving Bruner, 26, 1347 Irving st. nw. and Herbert Lipschultze, 25, of 1502 Park rd. nw.

Bruner was taken before United States Commissioner Stanley King in Alexandria. After waiving preliminary hearing, he was held in $5000 bond on a combined charge of breaking and entering and stealing postal property. Lipschultze, who was taken before United States Commissioner F. Archie Meatyard, jr., in Bethesda, also waived preliminary hearing and was held in $2000 bond on the same charge.

Postal inspectors said the arrests resulted from the alertness of Mrs. Irene Wicker, a teller in the Alexandria bank, who quickly identified six money orders proffered by Bruner as having been stolen in the Silver Spring theft.

The Silver Spring theft occurred May 6, when a safe was stolen from a postal branch in Packett's Pharmacy, 8572 Piney Branch rd.

Producers' Loss Voluntary, Milk Trial Told

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association once promised to absorb a loss to prevent the Embassy Dairy from capturing a District Government milk contract, a witness testified yesterday in District Court.

The transaction took place 11 years ago, the court was told. The producers association and seven distributors here are charged with a price-fixing conspiracy.

The evidence was given by W. Gwynn Gardiner, attorney and gentleman farmer here. He said that officials of the producers association came to him in 1939 with their offer.

Gardiner said that the officials told him that if Richfield Dairy, which he represented, would make the low bid on the District contract, the producers would "protect us on any loss." The loss amounted to $10,609, he said.

At the time, Gardiner said, Embassy Dairy had the contract and was selling milk under it apparently for less than Richfield paid the association for milk at the wholesale level.

Gardiner in preliminary questions said that he ran five farms "at a loss" except on March 15, when they proved profitable for the one day—when taxes are paid.

"Then you are a gentleman farmer," quipped Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

Prosecutor Robert H. Winn said that Gardiner's testimony would show that the association was trying at the time to drive Embassy, a nonmember, out of business.

In other testimony, Safeway Stores representatives flatly denied that they ever "agreed" to fix prices with other distributors.

Robert C. Sneed, a Safeway official, said he never agreed with other milk distributors on "anything."

Hugh Hall, a milk expert formerly employed by Safeway, told the court he gathered material on milk marketing for the firm but never received a suggestion from the association to rig prices.

Kay, 34, of 202 Woodland dr., leg fracture and possible hip injuries, and Robert P. Neyans, 29, of 116 Poplar st., admitted for observation with chin cuts, both in "fair" condition.

Police said the car, driven by Daussman, collided with a truck operated by Haywood Brown, 38, of New York, as Brown was making a turn and was at right angles to the highway.

He's in Chester Jail

Housebreaker Convicted in Absentia

Albert R. Jackson, 35, 432 New York ave. nw., sat in the Chester, Pa., jail yesterday, while a District Court jury convicted him in absentia of housebreaking and larceny.

Jackson went to Chester Monday night after the first day of his trial, looking for a friend who had been indicted on the same charges, but who had jumped $3500 bond.

He found the co-defendant, and in the process of "persuading" him to return, also found trouble. Both men were arrested by Chester police for brawling.

Judge James W. Morris ordered the trial to proceed without Jackson yesterday morning, and the jury deliberated less than 15 minutes before convicting.

The story begins on the night of January 15. Jackson, David J. Wilson, 47, 614 2d st. nw., and James Nelson, 43, 2350 6th st. uw., were indicted for breaking into the Federal Beef Co., 478 L st. nw., on that night, and removing a safe and $319 in cash.

Nelson pleaded guilty and is now in jail awaiting sentence.

Wilson was tried on the charges in March, but the case ended in a mistrial, March 27. He was released under $3500 bond to appear for a new trial Friday, and disappeared.

On Monday, Jackson learned that Wilson was in Chester, and took his knowledge to bondsman William J. O'Neil, 400 5th st. nw. O'Neil gave Jackson $29-round-trip fare to Chester.

Fourteen dollars and 50 cents later in Chester, Jackson had his man.

Dr. MacDonald said Elam apparently was using a hypodermic syringe shortly before he died.

Maryland U. Expansion Plan Set Back

Annapolis, Md., May 9 (AP).—The State Board of Public Works today withdrew its permission for President H. C. Byrd to proceed with "advanced planning" on $4,850,000 worth of new buildings for the University of Maryland.

Unanimously, the three-member board canceled its action of January 9, when it authorized Byrd to apply for Federal aid covering $171,000 in architects' fees for blueprints.

Governor Lane said the original action was based on the impression that Maryland would not have to repay the borrowed money unless the buildings were actually constructed.

As it turned out, the Federal Works Agency, which lends money to States for advanced planning of proposed construction, has the right to demand repayment after three years, whether the buildings are constructed or not.

Uncle Johnny Graves Dies; Oldest Confederate at 108

Higginsville, Mo., May 9 (AP).—Uncle Johnny Graves, the Nation's oldest Confederate veteran, died today. He was 108.

His real name was John Thomas Graves, but everybody knew him as Uncle Johnny.

Until about 10 days ago, when he became ill, Uncle Johnny could still feed himself, smoke his pipe and chew tobacco.

He liked to sit in a rocker at the State Confederate Veterans' Home here, reminisce and chat with visitors. He even offered advice on the atom bomb, which he called "the devil's instrument."

"The best thing that all nations can do today is to let well enough alone to keep peace," he said shortly before his 108th birthday anniversary last January 1. "No one ever wins in a war and the next one won't be funny."

He was the last veteran in the Confederate home that once housed 325 of his fellow soldiers. He had the 92-acre place virtually to himself.

It cost the State about $25,000 a year to keep the home open and see that Uncle Johnny was properly cared for.

He was released after serving in the Confederate army only two years. The reason?

Poor health.

Divorcee's Pampering of Only Child Spoils His Character, So She Sends Him to His Dad, Whose Second Wife Feels Unequal to Problem

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am at the end of my rope about my stepson. I'll call him Dean. He has always been spoiled by his mother and stepfather, who are fairly well-off, and he has turned out to be more or less of a problem child since reaching his teens. He is now 15 and as his mother is unable to handle him recently, she ships him off to his father, after refusing to let us have him in younger years.

I've had him the past four summers and this year when school is out he is supposed to come to stay with us permanently. The very thought sends chills through me. When I first took him I started to make a good friend of him, but this proved to be wrong tactics and I haven't found the right ones yet.

I feel that he is to be pitied for having a mother who simply wants to get rid of him; but gosh, the problem is too much for me. He isn't a bad boy—just spoiled, pouty and terribly lazy. He gives me an argument over the slightest chore, and sits and plays endless solitaire and smokes cigarettes. He slaps our two little boys around every chance he gets, and we daren't leave them alone with him for a minute.

He is very jealous of his father and throws the whole household into an uproar, wanting to go out with him alone, leaving the rest of us at home—not just once, but all summer. Four years ago I had a nervous breakdown and I have never been well since; and perhaps I should mention that my husband isn't well either and is barely able to make a living.

Actually I am on the verge of breaking up my marriage in preference to keeping Dean with us. My husband feels we should take the boy, of course, and if there were a chance of changing him at all, I might get a little enthusiastic. But I've tried too long and see no results. Can you give me any help? F.E.

Try to Practice Social Morality

DEAR F. E.: You say you've kept Dean for the last four summers; also, that you had a nervous breakdown four years ago and haven't been well since then. Notice the significant timing. Your decline in health started when the maladjusted stepson began to move into your life. That's not coincidence. That is a protest reaction.

A nervous breakdown is mostly caused by feeling completely stymied, unwilling to say "yes" and afraid to say "no" to some prospective big change that is resented or feared, and that will take a lot of doing. The patient doesn't know how to handle the issue, indeed very often doesn't recognize the nature of the conflict in his unconscious, thus falls ill emotionally from intolerable stress. —and faintly in the hope of shutting out special demands and dodging decision-making.

The only way you can help yourself, in this or any situation, or improve the quality of another's behavior in relation to you, is by learning to practice mental health and social morality in your daily experience.

This you do:

1. By realizing, maturely, that life is an obstacle race from start to finish.

2. By watching yourself for negative emotions, the worst enemy of your health or growth or happiness if they "take over,"—and by dissolving them in the light of awareness that they do flare up, it's true, but needn't govern your choice of conduct.

3. By facing difficulties matter of factly, with intent to work your way through them as they arise, instead of reeling from them in rebellious panic or trying to shirk your way past the challenge.

Beams' Resentment at Boy

THE task of helping your husband do something for Dean wouldn't break you down, nor would you find him impossible to change, if you weren't subjectively fighting the assignment, thus arousing his subjective resistance to your personality. You are vexed by all kinds of resentments of Dean's mother and taking it out on the boy undercover, meanwhile making some show of trying to please your husband by doing your "best" in the situation.

Sensing your feelings, the lad clings tenaciously to his dad for assurance, and maybe gets it when they are away from you and the smaller boys. And as for smoking cigarettes and playing cards endlessly, this suggests that he is helplessly isolated from normal group activities, either by psychological fetters or for lack of real opportunities, such as the family should provide. Camp life for Dean in summer and a couple of years in a good military prep school, where he'd be mustered into a bustling boys' world, might safely tide him through the worst of his "rejection" experience, jointly dealt him by you and his mother. Get together about making such plans and footing the bills.

Tobé Says...

Big-Brimmed Hats For Sleeveless Dresses

To complete the smart 1950 summer look, a simple big-brimmed hat is the thing to wear with pleated sleeveless dresses.

It may be a big Milan straw or a smooth body straw like shantung or baku or ballibuntal. Or even smarter still, one of the exotic Chinese straws like sipper, which is a great favorite with the Paris milliners this year.

The smartest big hats have old-fashioned velvet facings, or a fabric matching the dress. And there are even all-fabric big hats—in several layers of chiffon or net or organdie with velvet or grosgrain bindings.

Trimming should be simple—velvet or grosgrain bands and bows or single flowers or twigs or even feathers laid flat on the crown.

Science Keeps You Young

Break the Hurry Habit If You Want Happiness

(This is the eighth in a series of 12 articles on ways to keep young.)

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU can spare a moment, sit back and relax. . . . don't clutch the newspaper or sit with lips pressed tightly together, brow furrowed. "Sit loosely in the saddle of life" is a sage bit of advice passed along by Robert Louis Stevenson, and it is sorely needed in our time.

Tension is today's number-one gremlin. It's frighteningly aging, and there are few things that can take the joy out of day-to-day living quite so completely as nervous tension. What about worry, you may query? Worry is a form of tension.

Under the strain of high pressure living it's not easy to "just relax." It's small wonder that we've lost the art. Can it be recaptured? Authorities promise that the technique can be acquired, but not in a hurry. Hurry of any kind builds tension. Tension begins in the mind, under pressure, but once it gets a hold on a person it snarls up the muscles and must be dealt with there too. Start with physical relaxation.

BUT BEFORE we get on with the relaxing technique, let's break the hurry habit. We're geared to a fast pace and can't just drop behind. However, the trouble comes not so much from fast movements as from the anxious mental pushing and inner tension. This mounts, and then the tendency is to keep on hurrying when there is no longer any need for speed. It is particularly disastrous to start the morning hurrying, for that sets the pace for the day.

One career woman passes along these tips: "In walking, lengthen your stride and avoid short, jerky movements. To keep from getting keyed-up, allow for a 15-minute leeway all through the day — don't crowd your schedule. Actually more can be accomplished, for out of relaxation comes power. And keep in mind the kind of person you want to be . . . calm, poised, unruffled.

The more desperately you need to relax, the less time you have to do it. If no other time is possible, start to bed an hour earlier, being very leisurely about the preparations. Then let go . . . with your muscles and your mind.

Guests Will Get Real Nautical Flavor at Next Truman Party

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

WHEN Mrs. Truman returns from her tour with the President on May 16, one of her first engagements will be a luncheon for Mrs. Perle Mesta, United States Minister to Luxembourg. The luncheon will be given on board the U. S. S. Williamsburg on Friday, May 19. Ship will weigh anchor at 12:30 p. m. with 20 ladies on board. This may mean a sail down the Potomac, or the ship may just move out into the harbor a little.

Another engagement on Mrs. Truman's book is a garden party luncheon she will give on May 23 in the patio of Blair House. The First Lady will entertain jointly on this occasion with the ladies of the Cabinet in honor of the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club. Between 80 and 90 are expected to attend.

The luncheon is traditionally an annual event. It was not given last year because Mrs. Truman had not yet discovered how well the Blair House patio could be adapted to large parties. Small tables will be placed around the garden, and in case of rain, the guests have been invited for the following day, May 24.

Mrs. Truman plans to leave for Independence the end of May or some time in early June, it was announced yesterday at a press conference by Mrs. James M. Helm, White House secretary. Margaret's plans for the summer were not announced.

Other engagements on Mrs. Truman's calendar before she leaves for Independence include a reception which the White House aides will give in her honor on Wednesday, May 24, from 5 to 7 p. m.. It has not been decided where the reception will be held, but last year it was at Anderson House.

Surprise Party Really Was One

AT LEAST 50 people in Washington can keep a secret.

Former Representative Howard Coffin engineered a surprise birthday dinner for his wife on Saturday, which remained a secret until Marie Coffin walked into the Columbia Country Club's private dining room at 8 p. m. Up until 6 p. m. she had been spading her garden.

The Coffins had some difficulty recognizing their guests. Senator Robert Taft had added a black mustache. Mrs. Harold Burton had completely transformed herself with a Cyrano de Bergerac nose. And everybody rolled tremendous baby doll blue glass eyes.

Among others there were Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Senator and Mrs. James Kem, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. Parker West, who had been Mr. Coffin's right hand man in organizing the party.

What pleases Marie Coffin most is that Mr. Coffin, who's a very busy man, took time to arrange all the details of the party such as ordering the menu and the flowers.

Will Attend Boys' Clubs Conference

ON MAY 18, Mrs. Truman will attend a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel for delegates representing 300 Boys Clubs in various parts of the country and Canada. The day before, May 17, she will attend a ceremony marking the publication of the First Volume of the Papers of Thomas Jefferson, to be held at the Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress at 3:30 p. m.

Another engagement on May 17 at 3 o'clock will be when Mrs. Truman will receive Mrs. Robert Diamond, Mrs. Julius Stone, Mrs. Robert Wise and Mrs. Leonard Atkins, who represent the Ladies Auxiliary of the Kiddie Kamp Corp. This is a charitable enterprise founded by a group of members of the Order Knights of Pythias and sponsors a vacation camp for underprivileged boys at Sharon, Mass.

The First Lady will attend the open house which the Woman's Army and Navy League is having on Armed Forces Day, May 20, for the purpose of dedicating the rooms and beds that have been endowed at the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club. And she will attend a dinner to be given by the Democratic Women's National Council at the Mayflower Hotel on May 20.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Twelfth District Democratic Club of Dundaly, Md., will be received by Mrs. Truman on May 26 at 5 p. m.

Society of Sponsors Lauded by Secretary

SECRETARY of the Navy Francis P. Matthews, speaking to members of the National Society of Sponsors yesterday at their annual luncheon at the Mayflower, paid tribute to the members of this unusual organization for their "noble contribution to the Navy, and to the country, as citizens of this country."

The Society of Sponsors, established in 1908, is composed of women who have christened United States naval vessels. Members have a record of service and accomplishment, not only in promoting a love for their country and its form of Government, but also for their policy of providing scholarships to young men who aspire to become officers of the United States Navy, the Secretary said.

The group of 300 or more women heard the Cabinet officer say that there should be a bi-partisan American policy—not a Republican or a Democratic one.

Only with a bi-partisan policy, he said, can we maintain our position as the wealthiest and most powerful country in the world and meet the grave responsibilities involved.

On the subject of defense, the speaker said there should be no political advantage in providing for national security.

At the business meeting of the society, held yesterday preceding the luncheon, Mrs. Louis Denfeld, wife of the former Chief of Naval Operations, was elected second vice president of the association.

New members to the board of trustees named yesterday were Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Andrew Pickens, Mrs. James Casperian, Mrs. Fred Weigester, Mrs. Junius Morgan of New York.

Mrs. Julian Smith, wife of General Smith, United States Marine Corps, national president of the sponsors, presided at the luncheon. Among those seated with her at the head table were Mrs. Matthews, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Edward Palmer, first vice president; Mrs. Harry A. Baldridge, second vice president; Mrs. Staton Norman, Mrs. Royall Ingersoll, past president.

Also Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and Mrs. John F. Floberg, Admiral and Mrs. Edwin Foster, Admiral and Mrs. Albert Noble, Admiral David Clark, Admiral and Mrs. John Roper, Gen. O. P. Smith, United States Marine Corps, Admiral and Mrs. George Russell, and Capt. A. W. Turnbull.

Flowers Bloom, So Do Showers

JUDGE AND MRS. BENNETT CHAMP CLARK plan a party each spring when—they hope—their garden will be in bloom. Yesterday the blooms were there, all right. But sudden rain flurries kept the guests indoors.

Mrs. Clark, in a blue and white print, was close to the door, as her friends came in. And Judge Clark wasn't far away.

Mrs. Wade Haislip took her turn at the tea table as General Haislip chatted with Mrs. Emil Hurja. Mrs. Francis Thomas was at the other end of the table and Mrs. Parker West was also asked to assist.

Chief Justice Fred Vinson came in, and also there were Justice Tom Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Mrs. Justin Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, and Joseph Hergesheimer, the famous author who has been here for a stay of several days.

Painter Gives Party For Two Subjects

ALFRED JONNIAUX, former Belgian court painter, and Mme. Jonniaux entertained yesterday at a studio reception for Representative John Kee and Representative Charles A. Eaton, present and former chairmen of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives. Their portraits, commissioned by the committee and painted by Mr. Jonniaux, were on view at the party from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m.

Baron Silvercruys, Belgian Ambassador, was among the diplomatic guests who attended the reception. Others included the Ambassador of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen, the Ambassador of Thailand and Princess Wan Waithayakon, the Ambassador of Panama and Senora Herbruger, the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thors, and the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann.

Representative Eaton's daughter, Mrs. Russell Burwell of Cleveland, Ohio, was among the guests. Capitol Hill was represented by Senator and Mrs. Clinton P. Anderson, Senator Margaret Chase Smith, Senator and Mrs. H. Alexander Smith, Representative Frances P. Bolton, Representative Mary T. Norton, Representative James P. Richards and others.

Jewish Women's Council Installs

New members of the board of directors of the Washington, D. C., section of the National Council of Jewish Women were inducted yesterday afternoon at a tea and musicale held at the Jewish Community Center.

The session was presided over by Mrs. Joseph Dessoff, president who also reported on highlights of the council's activities for the past year.

The musical program planned by Mrs. A. J. Kaplowitz, featured Mrs. Lewis Mulitz, coloratura soprano, Mrs. Fredrich Simon, concert-violinist, and a duo-piano team of Mrs. C. H. Small and Mrs. Kaplowitz. Tea was served by Mrs. Melvin Gusdorf, chairman of hospitality.

PEO Sisterhood Opens Annual Convention; Organizer Speaks

The fifteenth annual convention of the District of Columbia Chapter of the PEO Sisterhood opened yesterday morning in the Terrace Room of the Shoreham Hotel, with Mrs. Leah S. Shirey, organizer of Supreme Chapter of Long Beach, Calif., as guest of honor.

Highlight of yesterday afternoon's session was a talk by the Rev. Crawford W. Brown, D.D., Canon of the Washington Cathedral. Referring to our atom bombing of Japan, Canon Brown said that we have "a most unpleasant skeleton in our national closet."

Last night, the husbands of the PEO members turned actors to present "A Muddled Meeting," a takeoff on the PEO's model meeting which is held annually. The skit took place at the annual banquet, held in the Terrace Room. Mrs. Shirey delivered a greeting from the Supreme Chapter at that time.

Jades Do About the Same Job as a Rabbit's Foot

By Ellen Buell Parry

SIMON KRIGER, who lived in China for 25 years before coming to Washington in 1938, will have his famous collection of original jades at the Home Show at the Armory beginning Friday.

Among his treasures is an exquisite translucent 12-inch plate, believed by Kriger to be the only jade plate in the world and the most outstanding piece of jade in this country.

He has beautiful necklaces and bracelets. He says the Chinese feel that jade ornaments, worn on the person, bring good health. Children are kept from harm by a jade bracelet or anklet.

Mr. Kriger also has pieces of "fingering jade," which he says the Chinese use to calm their nerves. "They caress the piece, rub the cool, smooth surface against their cheeks. They believe it prevents calamity and misfortune," says Mr. Kriger.

Same might be said of a rabbit's foot—but it's not nearly so ornamental.

HOLTON ARMS SCHOOL is inaugurating a new method of choosing a May queen at its jamboree this afternoon—Friday, if it rains.

There are two candidates, Barbara Ann Cross of Washington, from the high school senior class, and Nancy Conner of Charleston, S. C., from the junior college senior class.

One of the two will be May queen, the other the maid of honor. The important decision will be made by a time-honored method—albeit new to Holton Arms. The girls will draw straws.

THATCHER AND FRIDA WINSLOW have leased their Georgetown house for the summer and have taken a house at Bass River on Cape Cod until after Labor Day.

Thatcher's family—a Boston clan—have summered at Bass River for generations. His brother, Richard (Dick) Winslow, secretary general of the American delegation of the United Nations, owns a place there now.

Frida's mother, Mrs. Tillman Leigh, the Washington interior decorator, hopes to join the Winslows for short visits.

ATTRACTIVE Olive Ewing Clapper, widow of the well-known correspondent, Ray Clapper, is taking a new job this week with the Department of Labor, doing public relations work.

In 1946 she wrote a best-seller, "Washington Tapestry." Since then she has been writing for magazines and lecturing. For a while she was on the Washington staff of Look magazine.

Cutting a Mirror Won't Bring Seven Years' Bad Luck, but It's a Risky Business for Amateurs, Anne Warns

DEAR ANNE:
Is it possible to cut a mirror without shattering it? If not, is it possible to make a mirror at home? We need one of an odd size.
Mrs. J. S., Leonardtown, Md.

Yes, it's possible to trim a mirror down to any size desired, but the job should be left to a professional glass cutter. Silvering glass to make a mirror is also no job for an amateur, requiring special tools and knowledge.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a recipe for real Hungarian goulash?
W. W. C., Washington.

HUNGARIAN GOULASH

1 pound solid lean beef; 1 pound solid veal; ½ pound solid pork; 3 tablespoons flour; 1 cup diced beef suet; 3 teaspoons salt; 3 cups water; ¼ green or red bell pepper; 1 cup cut tomatoes; 1 clove of garlic, if desired; ½ teaspoon paprika or more; 1 dozen small white onions or more; 6 potatoes, medium size.

Have beef, veal and pork cut into 1-inch cubes at meat counter if possible, but keep them separate. Cut suet into small pieces. Cut bell pepper fine. Stew and strain tomatoes. Mince garlic. Use onions about size of English walnuts. If smaller, use more in proportion. Peel and leave whole. Pare potatoes and cut into cubes the size of the meat.

Put flour on a platter, turn meat lightly in it, each piece separately. Keep veal separate. Put suet into a pan, and fry to a light brown, until you have sufficient fat in which to fry the meat. Remove cracklings. Sprinkle the salt into pan. First lay beef and pork into it, side by side (not heaped) and fry to a light brown on all sides. Lift to a boiler. Then fry veal to a light brown. Lift out on a platter for later use. If there is any fat remaining in pan, drain off. Then put the three cups water into pan, bring to boil, and loosen the brown on the bottom. Pour through a wire strainer over beef and pork. Add finely cut bell pepper, stewed tomatoes, minced garlic and paprika.

Simmer, covered, 1½ hours, then add veal. Continue simmering, covered, 30 minutes, then add onions and 10 minutes later, potatoes. Simmer, covered, 20 minutes longer. Total time for cooking—2½ hours. Add water from time to time as necessary. Season as required. Should gravy be too thin, thicken with a little more flour which has been blended with cold water. Cook meat slowly at all times. Try to keep all ingredients whole. Stew is more attractive if carefully made. For an extraattractive dish, cut the potatoes into small balls before cooking and peel off outer layers of onions until they are same size as potatoes. This recipe serves six.

DEAR ANNE:
For Mrs. J. Lee, with reference to glass fiber shades and their cleaning: I used, very successfully, 2 parts carbon tetrachloride and 1 part water, applying with soft cloth, rather moist, with a circular motion from top to bottom. I've done this twice and the shades are as fresh as the day I bought them (15 months ago).
JOHN W. HARTSFIELD.

State to Aid Beach Fight On Gambling

Colonial Beach, Va., May 9 (Spl.). The Governor of Virginia will lend a hand in the solving of the problem of slot machines and mixed drinks here. Maryland's governor is also interested.

Governor John S. Battle said in Richmond that the State will "go it to the limit of our ability and efforts to work out a solution."

Maryland's Governor William Preston Lane, jr., in Annapolis, said he will seek from Attorney Generall Hall Hammond "what authority we might have to act."

Both statements came after Colonial Beach Mayor Norman Brewington proposed that the Governors of the two States help him solve the problems of gambling and liquor posed by the authorizing of a gambling ship in the Potomac River off the beach.

Brewington said he will ask the town council at its Thursday night meeting to approve a request that Governor John S. Battle of Virginia take the matter up with Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland.

It came to a head Saturday with the arrival of a three-deck seagoing barge, the Pleasure Island, outfitted for dancing, slot machines and mixed drinks.

The boat anchored offshore in the Potomac River here. It plans to cater to resort trade with slots and drinks, illegal in Virginia, because the river is technically under Maryland jurisdiction. Charles County, opposite this town, issues slot machine and liquor licenses.

At least four pier heads, beyond the low water mark on the Virginia side and therefore legally in Maryland, will have slot machines this summer. One wil serve mixed drinks.

Couple Loses Suit Against D. C. Hospital

District Court Judge T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday ruled that a woman treated at Freedmen's Hospital could not collect damages from the hospital for leg burns suffered during treatment.

Mrs. Dennie Little, 23, 409 L st., asked $15,000 damages for scars on her legs, which resulted from blisters received in the hospital. Her husband, Roscoe, 26, asked $5000.

She was admitted to the hospital in May 1948, critically stabbed in the chest by her husband. Dr. John R. Ford testified that she had an imperceptible pulse and a "zero-zero" blood pressure.

The burns apparently resulted from the abrasion of bed sheets as restraints during the operations, which according to Assistant United States Attorney Stafford Grady saved the woman's life.

Judge Goldborough ruled against the couple, saying that the "leg injuries sustained were a necessary result of the treatment which saved the woman's life."

Two Members Are Named to Welfare Board

The Prince Georges County Commissioners appointed two new members to the County Welfare Board yesterday.

One appointment filled a vacancy that has existed for a year. The commissioners and the Maryland Department of Public Welfare have repeatedly locked horns in discussion of this vacancy.

The commissioners consistently backed Harry T. Jenkins of Suitland for the post, but the State department refused to sanction him, offering a choice of two others.

Appointed to fill this post and another that will become vacant May 31 were Jenkins and Granville Gude of Laurel, one of the State-supported nominees. The term that is to expire at the end of the month is that of Mrs. G. Carville Bowen.

Ambrose Sued For $75,000 In Stamp Deals

Harold F. Ambrose, former special assistant to the Postmaster General and alleged engineer of get-rich-quick stamp-buying deals, has been sued for $75,000 by a Toledo, Ohio, businessman.

The suit was filed this week in Alexandria Federal Court by G. H. Himelhoch, who says he lost $50,000 in the stamp scheme and asks that much plus $25,000 "punitive damages."

Ambrose, of 4701 31st st., Fairlington, was forced to resign his $10,000 a year public relations job with the Postoffice Department last January when the deals were first disclosed.

Himelhoch's suit is the first court action in the stamp-buying and selling operation, which involved about 25 persons and a total sum of $600,000, according to Postmaster General Donaldson.

The Justice Department said last week that the case will probably be presented this week to a Federal grand jury.

Himelhoch, in his suit, says he gave Ambrose $50,000 to buy an airmail commemorative stamp issue.

Broadway on a Spring Day

Celebs About Town: Admiral Halsey in mufti, sports jacket, dark Hollywood specs (and the other necessary essentials), waiting to get his boots polished by a sidewalk shoe-shine impresario . . . Insists on sharing the patty-cakes with the cast . . . Toni Arden, the Tweetheart of the Copa, reading the orchids about her here as her java chills in the 6th Ave. Automat . . . Saki, the Yankee-Japanese sound-effects expert (for the hits), who is such a look-alike for Alexander Woollcott . . . Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., sketching Broadway kerricters at 5 a. m. from an all-night-hired-cab.

Sallies in Our Alley: When Toots Shor, the restaurateur, was admitted for membership in The Lambs (the actors' club), a star got up and publicly announced his resignation . . . "After I pay my taxes," he groaned, "I have nothing left!" . . . "Nothing," sarcasmed Art Mooney, "except the freest government in the world."

City Hall Vignette: It happened yesterday . . . A pair of young newlyweds (about 30-ish) plainly, but neatly groomed, came out of the Marriage Clerk's office arm-in-arm and hesitated a moment . . . They approached a stranger who was leaning against the wall reading a newspaper . . . "Beg your pardon," said the groom. "Would you please help us out? We've just been married in there. We don't know a soul in New York City. Would you kindly throw some of this rice at us?" . . . And so saying he turned over a small brown paper bag . . . The stranger smiled, tossed a handful of rice at them, and the happy couple floated off on their own personal cloud.

'Modern' Childbearing

Early Activity Stressed in Motherhood

Reporter Carol Taylor, who returned to her job soon after her daughter was born, says early activity is better. This is the third article of a series on new methods in childbearing.

By Carol Taylor

CHAPTER THREE

The next morning at 10 the nurse breezed into my room and invited me to get up and sit in a chair by the window while she changed my bed.

Resolved to be sporting if it killed me, I eased my way up gingerly, pussyfooted to the chair, and with some difficulty seated myself.

This was my first introduction to what the doctors call "early abulation."

It turned out later that my introduction had been a bit premature to meet my doctor's favor.

Later that afternoon I asked another nurse if I might get up and go to the bathroom. She went out and consulted my chart.

"Sorry," she told me firmly. "The doctor left orders that you should not get up for 24 hours."

I told this story to a doctor later. He smiled a bit grimly. "Easier to make a bed when the patient's not in it," he remarked.

When my sister, who had her first baby 11 years ago, visited me that first afternoon, I'd boasted that I'd been out of bed already. She nearly had a conniption.

Now Standard Practice

"They kept me in bed for two weeks," she cried.

The third day I was even prouder of myself when I traipsed down the corridor to take a shower bath. My sister came nearer to fainting over this expedition than I did.

Early walks for new mothers is practically standard practice today. In California they make women walk back to bed from the delivery table, the Maternity Center Association reports.

Miss Lottie Morrison, assistant director of Sloane Hospital for Women at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, described the system there.

"Patients go to bed for 12 hours after delivery and then they get up and walk around the bed twice. The next day the mother sits in a chair from 3 to 10 minutes, depending on how she feels. After the third day," she concluded, "I'd say she's on her own."

Miss Verda Hickcox, head supervisor for the Lying-In Hospital of the New York Hospital, said that, for the past two years, most patients get up sometime during the first 24 hours and may take a shower on the third day. She is all for the technique.

"Mothers are not so weak; they're happier, more contented and stronger."

Formerly, she said, mothers frequently fainted when they first got up. Then it was the custom for them to practice dangling their feet 20 minutes in the morning, 20 minutes in the afternoon, before they made a break from bed.

An obstetrician showed me a chart on one mother which illustrates the progression of "early ambulation." She had her first two babies at home in 1938 and 1939. In 1941 she spent 10 days in the hospital with her third baby. She got out of bed the ninth day.

With the current baby, she dangled her feet over the side of the bed the evening of the first day after her baby was born and again on the second morning.

Later that day, she sat up for 20 minutes.

Breast Feeding

Naturalness and lack of fuss—that's the new idea of having a baby. Breast feeding fits into this pattern.

More and more, doctors and nurses are encouraging women to breast-feed. But the percentage of babies who leave private and voluntary hospitals on the breast is surprisingly small.

The rate climbs much higher in the city hospitals, where the percentage is quoted as high as 95 percent on breast feedings.

"There are lots of myths about breast feeding ruining the figure and promoting sagging breasts. It's all nonsense," observed Dr. Herbert Thoms, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Yale University School of Medicine.

Many mothers start out nursing their babies, but finding that it requires patience simply rebel and put the infant on the bottle.

Why is it better to nurse your baby? Nurses and doctors say that mother's milk builds up natural immunities. It's more economical, convenient and satisfies the emotional needs of the mother and baby. The return of the mother's reproductive organs to normal is hastened if she nurses her baby, authorities maintain.

Dr. Mary Jane Sherfey, speaking to nurses who attended an institute at the Maternity Center Association declared:

"We all accept the fact that a breast-fed baby is better off than a bottle-fed baby; yet we are still in the era of formulae writing and early weaning."

Dr. Sherfey said that many women have turned to bottle feeding because there has been a subtle shift in emphasis on the emotional value that women give to the breasts.

"In olden days and in many less civilized communities today, the breasts as baby feeders were quite socially accepted and women nursed their children openly and without same. But today!

"The breasts have been almost eroticized in the minds of both women and men. Their mammary function is practically kept a closely guarded secret. Modern advertising, art, literature and the movies, capitalizing on sex, have helped strengthen this shift in emphasis.

"We are now in the stage where readjustments are being made" said Dr. Sherfey. "The swing back to breast feeding in medical thinking in the past few years is one evidence of that readjustment."

Can Studio Audience Do TV Any Good?

By C. E. Butterfield

NEW YORK (AP).—A question television is going to have to answer one of these days is how often and how much the studio audience should be made a part of a program.

Sometimes so many studiou scenes are inserted into a telecast that it seems the audience is the place for action rather than the stage. There have been instances, particularly Super Circus of ABC, where an act on the stage was snapped off at a point of climax to switch to a studio scene.

Of course, celebrities in the audience often make "camera news." Also studio views lend themselves at times to background effects such as superimposition of the title of We the People on a picture of the audience.

Certain studios already have solved the studio scene problem to their own satisfaction. Fred Waring keeps out audience views altogether; so does Arthur Godfrey. Arthur, in welcoing the studio audience to his TV-only show, usually tells the visitors that they would be able to see better at home, where they would not have to peek around cameras mounted in front of the stage.

FRED ALLEN, now on a radio vacation except for guest appearances, has a date Thursday night to join the Perry Como program on NBC. As yet, Fred hasn't revealed what his plans migh be next fall, when his vacation technically will be over . . . George Fielding Eliot, who during the war was active as a CBS commentator on Military affairs, has been scheduled to do three Sunday night broadcasts on MBS to discuss "What Is America's Military Power?"

SUMMER listening again this season will find listening again this season will find a lot of the winter regulars off on vacations, with new and strange programs filling in in many instances. At NBC more than a dozen and a half shows will be away, with sponsors and the network filling the vacancies.

Most of the vacations will start in June, with a few a little earlier. Among the spaces which sponsors plan to fill themselves are those occupied by Theater Guild, Fanny Brice, People Are Funny and Life of Riley.

In the case of Phil and Alice Harris, their present sponsor is concluding on June 4 and taking over the Dick Powell who-dun-it on June 14. Fall plans for Phil and Alice, who are under contract to NBC, await decision.

Included in the shows going off without sponsor replacement are Cavalcade of America, Bob Hope, Fibber and Molly, Gildersleeve, Aldrich Family, Father Knows Best, Screen Directors' Plahouse, Jimmy Durante, Truth or Consequences, Dennis Day and Judy Canova.

NBC will fill these times, but will have help from a sponsor who has bought 65 half-hours of time for the three summer months. This is an average of six programs a week. Two to come within this arrangement are the currently running night Beat and Dangerous Assignment dramas on Monday nights.

In the list of programs to stop is the Screen Guild Theater, which, as previously indicated, is being dropped by its sponser in favor of television. It will end June 29. What its status will be next season hasn't been determined.

Among other changes, the Hollywood Star Theater already has moved to CBS, while This Is Your Life wil lgo over in May, both under sponsor arrangement.

Perfect Answer to a Foolish Question

The other day I wondered about the moral in the story that Gambler Jimmy LaFontaine had left more cash than John D. Rockefeller. Mrs. Webb Taylor of Riverdale, Md., comments:

"The moral is that neither of them could take it with them."

OVERHEARD

"My wife and I have a perfect agreement. I do all the work—and she lets me."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

My 7-year-old son, Andy, jr., wants to know why the hot dog is always longer than the roll. Do you know why this should be?

A. T. Radigan
3804 S. Kemper rd.
Arlington, Va.

Dear Andy:

The hot dog is not always longer than the roll. It should be, but it's not.

You see, when the hot dog is longer than the roll, the last bite is practically all meat, and leaves a tangy hot dog taste in the muncher's mouth.

No human can bear this exquisite torture for more than 15 seconds before murmuring: "I think I'll have just one more, but this is positively the last one."

So he orders "just one more"—and in doing so helps to keep America prosperous.

Business is good not only for the hot dog manufacturer, but for the fellow who makes the mustard, for bakeries, drug firms specializing in bicarbonate, and doctors specializing in middle-of-the-night tummyaches.

If the doctor and the druggist have lots of customers, they have more money to spend at the bakery for rolls, and at the butcher's for hot dogs. Business booms, and the wheels of industry spin in the best tradition of our free American economy.

Then along comes the subversive fellow who serves a sandwich in which the hot dog is shorter than the roll. His customers end up with a mouth full of dough, instead of meat—and they don't order another.

Everybody suffers except the insidious supporters of foreign ideologies, who rub their hands in glee and wait for our economy to grind to a chaotic halt.

The thinking citizen asks himself: When will our Congress act to prohibit the manufacture, sale, possession and interstate shipment of the short hot dog? But our elected representatives take no action.

I tell you, sir, this Nation is faced with a crisis of the first magnitude. Bill

CLUB NEWS

Next meeting of the District Line Club (tonight at 8, Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw.) will present a rather unusual program.

Guests of honor will be Maurice H. Thatcher and Mrs. William D. Wrightson. Thatcher is a one-time Governor of the Canal Zone and member of the Isthmian Commission, and for 10 years was Congressman from Kentucky. He'll show movies of the Panama Canal that he made while serving there.

Mrs. Wrightson is the daughter of the late Gen. William Crawford Gorgas, the famous sanitation expert whose work made the building of the Panama Canal possible. Mrs. Wrightson will contribute some ancedotes about her life in the Canal Zone.

A curious sidelight to the decision to devote this meeting to the Panama Canal is something that I'll bet most members don't know. A charter member of the club, W. M. Devine, of 234 F st. nw., helped to build the Panama Canal in his younger days.

Refreshments will be served, and you're all welcome to attend and swap corny puns with the active members.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Norman Duberstein passes along a definition he attributes to Neal H. Herndon of 1419 Buchanan st. nw.:

"Bald head: A receding forehead in need of reseeding."

ADD NAMES

Edith J. LaPorte of 236 Massachusetts ave. ne. wonders whether we noticed a recent society item which revealed that a fellow named Flood married a girl named Fleet, and that the couple will live in the fine old naval town of Annapolis.

ILL WIND

My two fevers, spring and hay
Soothe my mind and smooth my way.
Outdoor chores with anguish fill me,
Cleaning house would simply kill me.
I would not take anything
For my fevers, hay and spring.

KID STUFF

Mrs. John F. Lukens of 4325 Kentbury dr., Bethesda, Md., passes along a story about her next-door neighbors.

Mrs. E. Douglas Burton and her 3-year-old son, Chris, were driving past Logan Circle the other day when Chris spotted the equestrian statue of General Logan and yipped:

"Look, Mommie! Hopalong Cassidy."

Bell, CWA Unit Sign Wage Pact

New York, May 9 (AP).—Bell Laboratories and Division 8, CIO Communications Workers of America, have signed a memorandum agreement, the Federal Mediation Service announced today.

The Bell Laboratories, case was one of four phases of wage disputes between Bell System telephone companies and the CWA. The union had threatened a Nation-wide strike April 26.

Frank H. Brown, regional director of the mediation service, said the memorandum agreement was reached last night. It is subject to approval by the CWA international office and ratification by some 1200 Division 8 members.

The dispute invloved wage increase demands under a contract reopening clause. Brown said the union obtained "rate range adjustments," but declined to give any details.

Brown also declined to express an opinion as to whether the agreement might provide the basis for settlement of other CWA disputes with Bell System companies.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Lie Sees Grave Threat to U. N.

(The brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, today goes to Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, now on an important mission to Moscow.)

By Drew Pearson

Shortly before Trygve Lie left New York on his current mission to Moscow, President Truman had announced that the world looked better—a statement which Truman reiterated last week. And Trygve Lie, talking privately to a friend immediately afterward, said:

Pearson

"Im am glad they (the press) did not ask me to comment on President Truman's statement yesterday that the world situation is better than in 1946!"

For the Secretary-General of the United Nations thinks the world situation is in a very dangerous state—not because of an immediate threat of war but because the U. N. is threatened for its very life. This is the reason for his trip to Moscow.

"I am going to tell them," he told a friend before he left, "what do you want to do about the United Nations; we must decide now, because in another six or eight months if the deadlock is not broken, this organization will collapse."

Lie added that he thinks the Soviets recognize that their walkout has been a blunder, just as the Berlin blockade was a blunder. But Russia is a big power and it cannot extricate itself from this situaton without some face-saving. Here he made a little circle with his thumb and forefinger, and peeped through it, and said:

"Some little peephole—just some little peephole."

Since then the search for the peephole has been made by Lie, the British Foreign Office and the French. The final result now depends on Lie's talks in Moscow.

Cornerstone Layer

Most Americans think of Trygve Lie as a stout, cornerstone-laying character, with a heavy Scandinavian accent, who does something or other at the United Nations.

This vagueness is partly Lie's fault. He has operated for four years on the conviction that the Secretary-General of the U. N. should keep out of controversy. But he has changed in the last few months. Lie is now displaying some of the fire he used to display when, at 16, he became a local president of the Norwegian Labor Party—or the kind of fire he displays now on a Long Island tennis court when the score is six games to six and he wants to break the deadlock.

For, in these last months of his five-year term as Secretary-General, Lie is determined to break the deadlock of the cold war. He is throwing his old caution to the winds. He doesn't care any more whether he has the support of the State Department.

Actually, he has lost it. Inside fact is that the State Department tried to sidetrack his mission to Moscow.

For a long time he has been working behind the scenes with the skill of the best Washington lobbyist. One day he whisks the Cuban delegate off to lunch at the Lies' Long Island home. Next day he makes a private appointment to meet a British or French delegate at the Manhattan headquarters of U. N.—where talks are more unobserved than at or near Lake Success.

And the next day, a Polish or Ukrainian delegate for dinner—possibly mixing them with some of the New York City officials in talk about the headquarters building.

Began as Office Boy

Now 53 years old, the Secretary-General of the United Nations was born in Oslo, the son of a carpenter. His first job was as an office boy in the headquarters of the Norwegian Labor Party. At 16 he became president of a local labor branch, and at 23 he was one of the leaders of the party. At the outbreak of the war, Lie was Minister of Commerce in the Norwegian government, and by February, 1941, was appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs, then in exile in London.

Lie's catapult into U. N. affairs came during the San Francisco conference which founded the United Nations, where he served as chairman of the commission which drafted the charter of the Security Council.

At that time—and since—he has sometimes sided against the United States and Great Britain. In fact, during the early U. N. days, he was nominated by Ambassador Gromyko to be the first president of the General Assembly. Now his influence is emphatically against his onetime supporters.

In New York, Lie gets along well with Mayor O'Dwyer and Bob Moses, with whom he confers every two weeks or so regarding the great international city on the East River of Manhattan which the Rockefellers are erecting as a symbol of international peace.

This, of course, has put him in touch with various New York civic leaders, such as Tom Watson of International Business Machines, Winthrop Aldrich of the Chase National Bank and John W. Davis, former Democratic candidate for President, who have come to regard Lie almost as a fellow New Yorker.

Last December, Lie told a friend that he thought the cold war could be ended by a high-level conference between Truman, Stalin, Attlee and Bidault. But when he was urged to see President Truman about such a meeting, Lie smiled.

"The State Department wouldn't like it," he said, "and they always keep a good watch on me."

In this, Lie has one remotely common interest with Senator McCarthy. While he doesn't believe there are Communists in the State Department, he wonders why, when President Truman has made such a clean sweep of his domestic Cabinet family, he has never brought much change to the State Department. Lie apparently feels that it needs a change.

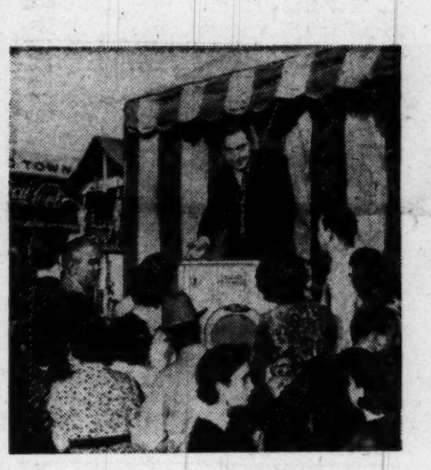
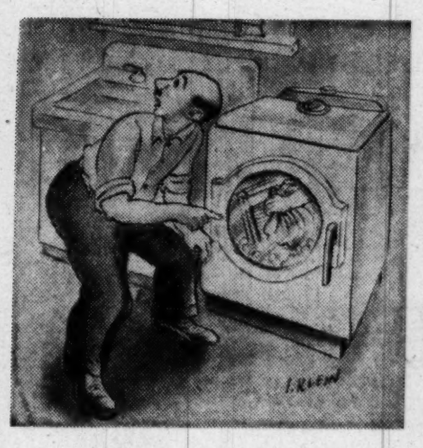
The Hecht Co. tells how

2,000,000 Women Walked Away From Washday



Just 13 short years ago, a far-sighted appliance man exhibited the first Bendix washer at a county fair. To the public, and established washer manufacturers, it was another "Fulton's Folly"... a wonderful idea, but of course it wouldn't work!

Almost from its inception, The Hecht Co. sold the new Bendix Economat and other Bendix automatic washers. Yes, housewives in Washington have been able "to walk away from washday too," thanks to Bendix.



Like the early "Model T," the Bendix soon won a place in America's heart. Bigger... better... low-priced Bendix washers were produced... climaxed by the Dialamatic in early 1950! Despite a stop in production during the war, by 1947 1,000,000 Bendix washers had been sold in cities all over the country.

And now, the 2,000,000th Bendix has slipped off the production line. A pretty good record for an idea that became a reality such a short while ago. See the gleaming Bendix washer on display at The Hecht Co. (7th St. window) tomorrow... commemorating the washer that will let you walk away from washday!
